Catarhal Deafness Cannot be Cured
 by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a humming sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarhal deafness. Halls' Catarrh Cure acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Halls' Catarrh Cure. THE CONFESSIONS OF ROXANE (By Frances Walter)

THE EXPECTED HAPPENS.
 (Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
 When we came in sight of our former dwelling place Mariam's enthusiasm began to show signs of waning. She no longer talked with the nervous rapidity which had enlivened the first part of our journey, and as we drew nearer she lagged behind as though unwilling to approach our destination. Finally she gave utterance to what was on her mind.
 "Suppose the police are still there?" I glanced at her quickly.
 "In that event we probably shall be arrested on the spot, for they could have but one purpose in being there."
 "Do you think they will be there?"
 "I don't know."
 There was a long silence.
 "Roxane, do you really want to go, after all?"
 "I must confess that I am not quite so curious as I was before we started."
 "Nor am I. Shall we turn back?"
 "No. I have a question to ask Mr. Kenwood, and I am curious to know what his answer will be."
 "What is the question?"
 "I want to know how it feels to be shot."
 "Oh, Roxane, how horrible!"
 Mariam shuddered and looked doubtfully at me, but she did not question me further, and soon we arrived at the entrance to our apartment house. Mariam's face was pale and her limbs seemed about to give way under her as we mounted the first flight of stairs on our way up, but the fact that we saw no policeman anywhere apparently encouraged her to go on, and by the time we had reached the landing upon which our rooms opened she had regained much of her former courage.

 Everything was as we had known it the week before, except that the dust on the floor seemed to be somewhat thicker and there was an air of loneliness about the place which was new to me.
 "Hurry," urged Mariam.
 Mechanically I took the latch key from my handbag and inserted it in the lock. The door opened and we slipped in. Suddenly I became aware that there was some one behind me and I wheeled about.
 A very large and very complacent looking man whom the open door had hidden was looking at me very intently, and, although he wore civilian dress, I guessed that he was a policeman.
 "I have been waiting for you," he said very quietly. "I thought you would come back pretty soon."
 Both Mariam and I, frozen with fear, stood speechless.
 "Come with me," said the man, after pausing a moment for us to say something through the open door but neither Mariam nor I moved.
 "Come on; this won't do," he urged in a tone which was not at all harsh or ill-natured. "I'm not going to hurt you at all. Just follow me quietly and everything will be all right."
 His manner was positively soothing after the first shock of his appearance and we moved forward in response to his plea. Walking slightly in advance of us, he went across the hallway and knocked at a door which I recognized as that of Mr. Kenwood's apartment.
 "Come in," said a muffled voice, and in we walked.
 Mr. Kenwood, garbed in a dressing robe, sat in an easy chair in the middle of the room.
