Countess de Turcynowicz was formerly Miss Laura Blackwell, of Georgetown and St. Catharines. She became a grand opera singer and while touring Europe met her husband, a Polish nobleman, at present! inspector-general of the sanitary division of the Russian army. She settled down with him at Suwalki, in Poland, just on the borders of East Prussia, happy with her little girl, Wanda, and her twin boys, Stanislaw | and Hladislaw, when war came. These boys are now in a little school near New York. She is now touring in the interests of the Russian Red Cross and British War Relief. The things this young-faced woman, whose fair hair has turned white through suffering, could tell of Prussian fiendishness are unprintable. When, in September, 1914, the Germans came to Suwalki she eswounded to Warsaw.
