It is not likely that a war of such large proportions will ever again upset the world, but if it does happen human ingenuity will undoubtedly find ways and means of overcoming the difficulties which beset the combatants in caring for their wounded. Serious Disease Wasting Germans

(Special to the Whig.)

Berne, Aug. 28 .- Germany is suffering from an almost nation-wide epidemic of dysentery. German mortality rates have jumped from fifty to a hundred per cent, since the first of the year. Tuberculosis is ravaging the people, due to their weakened condition through lack of proper food. This information came to-day from a source of the highest authority. The German government is making frantic efforts to conceal the dysentery epidemic. All the German cities have stopped the publication of mortality statistics. The tuberculosis rate is said to have nearly doubled in the last few months. Every effort is being made to re-assure the German public.
