CHURCHES OF RUSSIA.

In One of Them is a Royal Tomb Made of Two Tons of Silver.

Russia is a land that is full of fascination for the tourist, and among its notable sights are the churches of the big cities. The Kremlin at Moscow is in itself worth a journey across half the world. Guarded by its battlemented walls are numerous churches, ancient and modern palaces of the czars and a thousand historic memorials. The whole of Moscow is a picture never to be forgotten—especially if seen in its winter setting of snow. White streets pursuing their way by the side of convent walls or through the stately gateways hum with the sound of swiftly moving sleighs; churches, fantastic, irregular, immense, with cupolas of dazzling gold or shining, blue, widening, dark blue, stand out free and isolated. Nearly every spot has its history.

There is, for instance, one famous church erected centuries ago by Ivan the Terrible, who brought an architect from Italy to design it and superintend its erection. A remarkable building was the result, and the czar expressed his pleasure "I like your building so much" that I intend to take precautions to prevent any fire like that from being erected anywhere. I am therefore going to put out your eyes." And he did, it will be an unimaginative visitor who misses going to see that church.

In Petrograd numberless interesting sights await the tourist. I will mention but two. In the Alexander Nevski monastery's principal church is the tomb of Alexander, who some hundreds of years ago was a great fighting chief and whose remains were brought from Lake Ladoga. They are incased in two tons of silver. The pile of silver is to be seen by all who visit the church, and above it is a tiny light which never goes out, symbolizing the human soul. Nearby is a church whose tombs are only for the very rich. The cost is heavy—about $5,000. Strange indeed is the spectacle as one enters the door. The tombs are raised like little tables, and on all of them appear the lights, never allowed to go out, symbolizing the souls of the departed, and on each table are fresh flowers. People kneel at those bedewed and romantic tombs daily.—New York Times.

PERILS OF PEARL DIVERS.

Dangers That Beest Native Workers in the Persian Gulf. The lot of the native pearl divers of the Persian Gulf is a hard one, for all run the risk of getting scurvy from the lack of fresh food. Ice, of course, is unknown in the sea, and the impure water breeds worms. The boiling and filtering of water do not appear to oriental people as yet. The salts, or rope pullers, get palms as hard and cracked as an ancient Bedouin's heel. They could prevent this by wearing gloves, but that would be a sign of effeminacy and bring ridicule upon them. The exposure in the water gives many of the divers weak hearts and tuberculosis, and many of them become deaf because the weight of the water breaks their ear drums. Sharks abound in the gulf, and many divers have had a hand bitten off. One young Arab was brought to the American dispensary at Kuwait with his whole side laid open by a shark that had got a wide mouth hold upon him. The boy survived. We asked him if he would give up diving now. "No," he said. "I will go back next year, I have to."

Colors in Flags.

Red is by far the most predominant color in the flags of the world. There is only one flag in Europe that does not contain red, and that is the standard of Greece. After red, blue takes pride of place, but many flags are entirely red except for minor devices. Egypt, Morocco, Austria-Hungary and Japan possess all red flags. No fewer than forty-two other countries display red freely in their banners, and the color is, in a natural sense, typical of valor and bravery. Blue in flags represents justice; white stands for purity.—Exchange.

The Puzzle of Life.

Life is a quaint puzzle. Here the most incongruous join into each other, and the scheme thus gradually becomes symmetrical and clear, when, lo, as the infant clasps his hands and cries, "See, see; the puzzle is made out!" all the pieces are swept back into the box—black box with the gilded nail—Bulwer-Lytton.
