NEW RUGBY RULES BAR SIDE-LINE COACHING And Substitutes Must Not Carry Any Information to The Players.

The latest revision of the football rules, edited by Walter Camp, the Yale football mentor, has one new feature which will do away with one of the most objectionable features of the game has developed during the past few seasons. This is the new rule which prohibits an incoming substitute from communicating with his team on the field until after the first play. In many of the big gridiron games the substitute-subterfuge was carried on to unreasonable extremes. It was no uncommon sight to see a substitute sent from the side lines with information at a critical point of a game.

Side-line coaching has been a subject with which the makers have been grappling for the last few seasons. First, the side lines were cleared of the many assistant coaches and scouts, who used to crowd both sides of the field at the important games. The freedom of head coach was also restricted, and when the new rules permitted frequent substitutions, these players were used as a means of conveying information from the coaches to the players on the field. Gradually the initiative was taken from the players until the game was rapidly becoming a contest of automations, which moved only at the beck and call of the coach on the side lines.

Prohibiting this objectionable feature will tend to throw the football players on their own resources and will develop strategy which heretofore has been dependent on side-line observation. There is but one exception to this rule and this is in the case of the quarter back. If the substitute replaces the quarter back, he is permitted to give the signal, but in no other way is he permitted to communicate with the players until after the first play.

The new restriction which has been placed on the forward pass will increase the value of this important play. One of the dangerous features of the forward pass has been the liability of the receiver of the ball being roughed. A new rule this season provides that when a player interferes with a player attempting to catch the forward pass, the penalty will be the loss of the ball to the offended side, at the spot where the foul was committed.

The place kick has been more clearly defined in the new code, and the play must be made by kicking the ball from its position when resting on the ground. This does away with the use of artificial tees, such as were used in some of the games last season. In one or two contests place kicks were made by placing a headgear on the ground and kicking the ball while it rested on the headgear. Gradually the rule makers are eliminating the objectionable features of the gridiron game. In the present edition of the rules the committee points out that the rules as they stand to-day should be allowed to crystallize as nearly as possible in their present form.

SUGGESTING DATES FOR WORLD'S SERIES

Saturday, Oct. 6th at Chicago is What Ban Johnson Proposes.

Details for the world's series are to be worked out at a special meeting of the National Baseball Commission to be held in Cincinnati.

September 20th. President Johnson, of the American League, says: The spirited race between Chicago and Boston for the American League pennant will have been definitely enough settled by that time. President Johnson said, to assure going ahead with the plans:

Although Charles A. Comiskey, president of the Chicago Club, declines to make any statement claiming the American League championship, orders for world series seats are beginning to pour in from middle west cities. One Chicago enthusiast placed an order reserving 32 box seats. These orders are being held up, however, until Chicago is certain of beating out Boston.

There is a strong possibility that the series, if Chicago is the American League contender, will start in late September or early October. President Johnson said, October 6th, the place for playing the first game is decided by the toss of a coin. President Johnson said the National League might waive this formality and agree to start the games in the west so that a Sunday game could be played.

Refuse to Reserve Tickets.

Seats for the world's series baseball games this year will not be reserved by mail, but every ticket possible will be placed on public sale at the grounds, the New York National League announced. Numerous letters asking for reservations have been received by the club, it was stated.

"Absolutely no reservations will be made and nothing will be done in the time to the world's series until the time has arrived when it will be possible to issue an announcement covering all details," the club's statement said.

PRESIDENT J. K. TENER SHOWED BACK-BONE

When He Fined Manager McGraw of The New York Giants.

In fining John J. McGraw an additional $1,000 for allowing an attack on President John K. Tener to be printed as coming from him, the National League set a precedent here that it will find to be extremely helpful to it in the future. By showing a backbone and a desire to begin quashing all attacks on administration of the league the directors will find it much easier to curb outbursts in the future.

Tacked on to the bottom of the lengthy statement in which the directors answered the request of the New York Chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America was a warning to managers and other employees of the league that future occurrences in which the head of the league or the league is made the victim of an attack suspension for the rest of the season will be a minimum punishment. There is at least one manager in the National League, and several players who never have had any hesitancy in showing some contempt for the way things have been done in the league. They doubtless will be curbed.

It has been customary for baseball followers in the east to poke some fun at the National League, calling it grandmother and other similar names. They have been accustomed to pointing to the American League as the virile, Czar-like exponent of capital punishment in the baseball world. The staggering punishment meted out to McGraw, however, is direct proof that the last days of President Tener in the older circuit are going to be flavored with some distinctly Czar-like actions.

The edict absolved the baseball writers from any blame in connection with the episode that first resulted in a meeting of the directors and what amounted to a formal apology from McGraw. He declared he did not make any such statements as those attributed to him, and left the writers to hold the sack.

The incident was reopened at the request of the writers, and, while the last decision admits it was not proven McGraw actually attacked the president with the words attributed to him, he was fined and reprimanded for having allowed the interview to be printed when it would have been easy for him to suppress it.

Adam Swigler, a star pitcher at the University of Pennsylvania last season, and signed by the Giants last spring, has reported to Manager McGraw. He is a sturdily-built chap.

WHY MACK CHASED BUSH.

"Bullet Joe" Gives Explanation of Why He Was Suspended.

Pitcher Joe Bush, who was last week suspended for the rest of the season by Manager Mack of the Athletics, explaining his tilt with Mack said:

"The trouble started after the fifth inning Wednesday when I was bumped for six runs and Cleveland took the lead. I went back to the bench feeling pretty sore, for I wanted win that game, not so much for myself but for the team. One of the A's stepped up to the plate and slammed out a pretty hit.

"Yes, and the other fellows were walloping them; too," replied Connie "if you would keep yourself in condition."

"Who said I am not in condition," I asked. "I'm all right, but my arm is bad. I had no right to be in there in the first place."

"That will cost you a hundred," replied Mack.

"At that, I lost my head. You had better add a couple of more to it and make it good," I told him.

"All right," said Connie, "you are fined $200 and suspended for the rest of the season. You will leave the club to-night."

Bush also admitted that Mack had called him for remaining out until 1 a.m. one night in Cleveland. "Bullet Joe" explained that he had attended a theatre.

Duke Kahnaskamoku equalled his own world's record of 23 seconds in winning the fifty-yard swim in the sport carnival at Honolulu recently. Norman Ross, of San Francisco, won the 440 yard race in 5 minutes 36 4-5 seconds.

The person who is eternally watching for a chance to "even up" is quite likely to find himself "turned down."

When all other doors are closed to him the prodigal may hope to find his father on the front steps.

Make it plain to the other fellow that your ideals are the best before you ask him to adopt them.
