THE HIT AND RUN GAME

IS USED BY MCGRAW'S NEW YORK GIANTS

While the Chicago Cubs depend upon the sacrifice style of play, the two styles described.

Two vastly different styles of play perfected to the utmost point, will meet in battle when the White Sox and Giants tear the wrapper off this year's world's series.

John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, is a graduate of the old Baltimore Orioles, where the only thing they taught was hit and run. Clarence Rowland is a graduate of no school says that of his own observation, and he pleads for the sacrifice, mixing it with just enough of the hit and run to relieve the monotony.

Hit and run sacrifice styles have met before, notably in 1912, when the Giants fell before the Red Sox. But never before have two teams come together who both typified highest excellent in these two basic points of baseball strategy.

It is saying a lot for sacrifice style of play to point to the Sox scoring record for the year, during which time they have accumulated fewer hits than have the Giants, but have scored more runs.

The sacrifice play is the one-run game. The devotees of this strategy believe in using every trick, sacrificing everything in order to get a runner around, once he reaches first base. As a rule, amongst leaders in the American league, pitching is tight enough for a margin of two runs to assure victory. The squeeze play is an embellishment of the sacrifice, but despite its use, is sincerely hated by most American league managers and certainly by John McGraw.

McGraw is a believer in the maxim that a hit's a hit. If a man's going to hit he might as well hit with a runner on first, thus placing another run in position to score, declares John.

The hit-and-run style, many maintain, will be disastrous for the American league team that tries to stop it because they will be unconsciously looking in vain for the sacrifice.

This seems to be ungenerous consideration of American league baseball. It seems rather certain to be true that the mixed use of sacrifice and hit and run will make the Sox more cautious, ready for anything, refusing to move far out of position to stop a base-runner and thus miss a ball smashed through the infield.

RUGBY'S PROSPECTS GOOD

Meeting of the Union Will Take Place Monday Evening.

Although nothing definite will be known until Monday, when the semi-annual meeting of the O.R.F.U. takes place, it is almost a certainty that the union will operate an intermediate as well as a junior series in the coming season. The officers were at one time of the opinion that there would not be enough teams to operate an intermediate series successfully, but have found that such is not the case.

Last season two military teams in London and a civilian team in Sarnia were comprised in the intermediate series. Nothing has as yet been heard from that section of the province, but in all likelihood a group will materialize. "Bill" Rhodes, sporting editor of the London Free Press, is an officer of the O.R.F.U., and is working in an effort to boom the game in Western Ontario. A Toronto group is already a certainty, as Capitals, Parkdales and Beaches have announced their intention of playing intermediate. With such hustlers as Frank Robbins and "Jack" McAllister working in Hamilton, the Ambitious City is practically sure of having an intermediate group.

Rugby enthusiasts are again reminded that the O.R.F.U. will meet on Monday afternoon, Oct. 1st, in Toronto, at a place to be announced later, when the season's plans will be discussed. All interested are invited to attend.

HERZOG WILL PLAY

Suspension of Giants' Captain and Second Baseman Raised.

President Hempstead of the New York National League club announced last night that the indefinite suspension of Captain Charles Herzog of the Giants had been lifted and that he will play in the world's series.

Herzog recently was suspended for refusing to accompany the team on its western trip on the ground that he was in poor physical condition. He will report with the Giants at Philadelphia next Tuesday.

Annual Football Fever.

Despite the war, the annual football fever has taken hold of the United States, and most of the big universities have games scheduled for the next few weeks. Therefore a considerable jump in the mortality rate may be expected. Many people who look with favor upon the popular college game shudder with horror at the "brutality" of boxing, and yet the pugilist, compared with the player of the gridiron game, is as safe as though he were at home in bed.

Football is a contest with death, and the grim reaper always has a considerable harvest. For many years the injured in football games have numbered from 200 to 500 annually, while the fatalities usually run from twenty to thirty. Imagine the popular indignation if ten or fifteen boxers were killed each month! In the rugby game, as played in England and her colonies and in Western America, fatalities and injuries are much less frequent, although it would seem that the ancient British game was in its infancy almost as hazardous as the American game.

TWO DAYS CHOPPED OFF

The Schedule for World's Series Ball Teams.

Two days are likely to be cut right off the playing schedules of the two big league pennant winners. Simultaneously with the winning by the Giants of the National League flag came the news that the New York Yankees are willing to wind up their season next Saturday, swinging Monday's final game to that date as part of a double-header.

This would add two days to a White Sox rest period and allow them to gain even more on the Giants from that standpoint.

Negotiations already have been opened between the Giants and the Phillies, with a view to switching the final Philadelphia contest to part of a double-header. The Giants' schedule carries them through the very last day of the season, October 4th, and if they get any rest at all it will be through changing some game.

Clarence Rowland already has begun to tune up his pitchers for the big fray. Russel worked only four innings against Boston before giving way to Claude Williams.

Rowland has in Danford and Williams two capable workmen, able, however, to travel only a short distance most of the time. He has made a success of pulling each of those men after a ball game was about half over, and this may be his scheme for the world's series.

Every pitcher the Giants and White Sox possess may be expected from now on to get a certain amount of work, some of them in more than one game.

PUNISHMENT FOR MCGRAW.

Decision of National League Proper, Although Delayed.

A vindication. That is the decision of the National League in favor of the baseball writers whose interviews John McGraw, manager of the Giants, repudiated following his trouble with Umpire Byron at Cincinnati some time ago, says Sporting Life, editorially. In fining McGraw $1,000 and "reprimanding" him, the league directors merely took the action they should have taken in the first place, without all the dawdling and waiting they injected into the case. It was the verdict to be expected from the start, judging from the league's evident unwillingness to bring the affair to a head. Perhaps McGraw and other baseball men in the future will not be so ready to shift blame for statements that get them in wrong from their own shoulders to those of newspapermen, for the latter have shown that they can fight their own battles.

Another Baseball Series.

The fall series between the St. Louis Nationals and the St. Louis Americans will begin Wednesday, October 3rd. For the first time in the history of the inter-city games the contest will be under the National Commission. Branch Rickey, president of the St. Louis Nationals, said he would allow the players on his team to share in the receipts.

FUTURE OF N.H.A. TO BE DECIDED

Players May Be Paid Percentage of Receipts in Lieu of Salaries.

The annual meeting of the National Hockey Association will be held on Saturday afternoon, Montreal, when it will be decided whether the association will operate or suspend for this season. One or two of the clubs are in favor of continuing the game again, but under different arrangement with the players. It is likely that the players will be offered positions on a percentage basis, as suggested by the Ottawa club some weeks ago.

All of the club owners are of the opinion that the days for high salaries are over and that the players must now take their chances with the owners. It has been suggested that the receipts as salaries and that a percentage be given to the owners, while the remaining portion be handed over to patriotic purposes. This would divide the receipts into three parts.

It is likely that a new president will be chosen again this season, as Frank Robinson has been credited with the statement that he would not continue in office. Arthur Ross has been mentioned by some of the clubs for the position, and a better man could hardly be selected, as he has been mixed up in hockey for a great many years. It is likely that Art. Ross will retire from the game as a player under any circumstances this season.

To be only forty-eight hours out of first place was the experience of the Indianapolis club this season. In the middle of the season during a big slump they dropped off the first rung over one night, but regained it the next day. Then a week before the season closed, St. Paul, taking advantage of the Indians being idle, won a game that gave them the leadership, but they lost it the next afternoon to Indianapolis.
