MARKET GETTING SMALLER

THE OLD CONDITIONS HAVE COMPLETELY CHANGED HERE

Various Reasons For the Decreased Number of Farmers on the Market are Given.

In the last few years there has been a steady falling off in the number of vehicles coming to the Kingston market. This has been so gradual as to attract little attention, except by some of the older residents who miss the sight of market wagons which lined the walks even up to Wellington street. At one time there were market wagons on Brock Wellington street and on Clarence street and many times the present number of citizens who attend the market now thus bought their produce.

Many reasons for the falling off are given. One person will say: "The corner stores have filled the requirements to the extent that the market is not as necessary." Another says: "The prices charged by the farmers are equally as high, if not higher, than in any of the stores." Others say: "The big companies go through the country and buy up the goods and the farmer does not have to drive in to the city to dispose of his produce."

In any case there is a decrease in the number of wagons and it is to be regretted. When the farmers from all the district came here on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of each week they offered their produce directly to the consumer. Hundreds of the women and men of the city took their baskets to the market and met the farmer directly. The benefit in prices must have been of some consequence as it thus decreased the trade at the stores to that extent. The benefit to the city as a whole was felt by the merchants who were able to sell their goods to the farmer who did his shopping while in town.

Now conditions are changed. The city merchant has to compete with the big companies, which have quantities of capital, in many ways. The farmer buys goods from a catalogue. The merchant loses that much of trade. The citizen goes to the market now and finds that prices are up owing to the decreased offering and corresponding increase in demand.

Perhaps with the coming of the automobile as a farmer's necessity, conditions will change back again. Coming to the city is not so inconvenient even for a long journey. The citizen can travel in his automobile to the market place and take his baskets home in that way, thus meeting the convenience of the delivery wagons of merchants. The merchants will benefit by the farmers realizing the benefit of seeing what they are buying rather than trusting to catalogue. The citizens hope for conditions to come back to those of a few years ago.

RUBY MILLAN TO PLAY
Will Again Line Up With the Champion Dentals.
Ruby Millan, son of Ald. D. J. Millan, the clever little centre player of last year's champion Dental of Toronto, will again be found with the O.H.A. senior titleholders. Millan is stationed at the Toronto Exhibition camp with the Dental Corps. Mac Sheldon, the Stewart brothers, Smille and Bill Box are the other members of the championship team at Exhibition camp. Jerry Laime is again counted on for the defence, and the full squad is rounded out.

To Produce "Green Stockings."
At a meeting of Queen's University Dramatic Club held on Thursday afternoon it was decided that "Green Stockings" the three-act comedy in which Margaret Anglin, the eminent Canadian actress, had such a long and successful run will be produced by the university society in the Grand Opera House in the early part of December.

Trouble Over a Room.
Two women had trouble over the renting of a room. They lodged a complaint with the police about the matter. They claim they were offered a room for $2.50 a week, and that near the end of the week they were asked $4. When they refused to pay this amount the woman renting the room is alleged to have assaulted one of her roomers. The case may come to the Police Court.

On Hunting Trip.
Police Constable Samuel Arnel stated today that he and his comrades were not worrying about the high cost of meat, as Constable "Tom" Mullinger, one of the crack shots of the force, had left on his annual hunting trip, and they were looking forward to receiving a big stock of game.

MAY IRWIN'S MOTHER DIES.

Mrs. Jane Draper Campbell Passes Away in New York.
Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Jane Draper Campbell, mother of May Irwin, which occurred in New York. Miss Irwin and her husband were attending the cattle show in Columbus, O., when they received a telegram announcing the death of Mrs. Campbell.

Mrs. Campbell was a Canadian, and had spent most of her life there. Two of her daughters achieved prominence on the stage, May and Flo, although the latter did not become so prominent as her sister. May was born in Whitby, Ont., and she and her sister started their theatrical careers by singing in variety theatres in the middle west, "variety theatres" being the forerunners of the modern vaudeville. Augustin Daly brought May Irwin from the obscurity of the variety hall to the drama and he introduced her to New York audiences in comedy parts. Her success was always a matter of great satisfaction and gratification to Mrs. Campbell.

DR. COLEMAN'S VIEWS.

What He Predicts Will Come To Pass.
Bowmanville Statesman.
Well do we remember when at Port Hope that Dr. H. T. J. Coleman, Dean of Faculty of Education, Kingston, was a man full of practical ideas for teachers and was an inspiration to all who heard his splendid addresses. Last week he addressed the teachers at Lindsay and won high praise from inspectors, teachers and local press. The Daily Warbler says he predicted within twenty years the absence of the desk from schoolrooms as well as text books and other paraphernalia peculiar to the modern school, "while a cheerful hubbub, similar to that of the busy workshop, will prevail. Genuine mastery of ready speech, the greatest of all gifts, can come only in an environment of perfect freedom. Consequently, the future classroom is sure to find room for more activity." Possibly in country sections farm schools similar to those established in the United States will take the place of rural schools while manual training schools such as Dr. Coleman foresees will obtain in towns and cities.

Serpt. Joseph Menden, who has been spending the past few weeks here with relatives had to go to Kingston yesterday to report to the convalescent home with which he is attached.
