GREAT ARTIST FIRST SQUARED-CIRCLE PATRON

W. Hogarth, Pictorial Satirist, an Early Devotee of Boxing Art.

These who consider that pugilism was born in infancy and fathered by human brutes are very much mistaken. The first patrons of the ring game were men of the highest distinction—The Earl of Peterborough, one of the greatest generals in English history, and William Hogarth, an artist who has never had a superior as a pictorial satirist. It is a coincidence that both of these fathers of boxing died on the twenty-fifth of October, the soldier in 1735, and the artist in 1764. It was the old Earl of Peterborough who discovered James Figg, the first English boxing champion. Figg was living in his native village in Oxfordshire when the Earl an enthusiast on the art of self-defence, heard of his prowess, and established him in London in the Tottenham court road, where Figg initiated the young nobility in the new science of fistic combat. The Earl himself was an earnest pupil, despite his advanced years. Hogarth, then a rising young artist, was also a devotee of many sports, and from a pupil he soon became an intimate friend of Figg. The professional card of the father of pugilism was designed by the celebrated artist. Many other famous men of Figg's time were patrons of the boxing game. Among them was Sir Robert Walpole, Earl of Oxford, the Prime Minister of England, who occupied a box in Figg's amphitheatre when the first champion defended his title against Ned Sutton, King George II., the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Cumberland soon set the seal of approval upon the new sport, and under Jack Brington's rules pugilism was established as a favorite British game.

HIGHLANDERS ARE OUT TO BUY PENNANT

Ruppert Emulating Example of Giants and White Sox—Bidding For Johnson.

That negotiations for the acquisition of Walter Johnson and his battery partner, Catcher Ainsmith, by the New York American League club are well under way, and that the deal is likely to be consummated within a few weeks was the assertion made to the Globe correspondent today by a man in close touch with the affairs of the New York club.

Col. Jacob Ruppert and his associates are out for a pennant-winner or New York, and neither money nor the power of persuasion will be spared with that in view. The signing of Huggins to manage the club is the first step toward the building up of a powerful team in the metropolis. Since the club's entry into this city in 1903 it has been beset by more or less hard luck and some rather inferior management, and its indifferent success as a pennant contender has been detrimental to the prestige of the American League.

This fact is now fully recognized, and a strong effort will be made to put the team in a position to command public favor. While in other cities of less importance the American League has for a number of years been in the ascendancy, New York has given the Giants the bulk of support because the National League team has been winning pennants, while the Highlanders have started out each season with bright prospects, only to trail along at the lag end of the season.

It is recognized by club owners of the American League that Johnson's great pitching ability is being wasted in Washington under present conditions, and that his transfer to New York would add immensely to the prestige of the league and to the revenue of the club owners. For this reason pressure is being brought to bear on Clark Griffith and the owners of the Washington franchise to relinquish their hold on the great pitcher and his battery mate. That Johnson and Ainsmith will be seen in a New York uniform at the opening of the season of 1918 is almost assured.

NEW ASSOCIATION FORMED

To Control Automobile Races in United States.

Reports from Uniontown, Pa., state that an effort is being made there to form a new association to control automobile racing on certain speedways throughout the country. The name selected for the organization is the National Grand Circuit of American Speedways, and it is reported that twenty-nine drivers have signed for the 1918 season with the organization, which in the contract with these drivers is represented by Charles W. Johnson, the Uniontown Speedway president.

Such major speedways as Indianapolis, Chicago, Cincinnati and Providence have agreed to have nothing to do with the organization and to stand by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association.

ARE "BARNSTORMING"

Walter Johnson and Grover Alexander Head "Mutineers."

In spite of the National Commission's rule against "barnstorming," two teams of major league players are touring the west. They opened at Kansas City a week ago. The "Americans" include Walter Johnson, Doc Livan, Derrik Pratt, Pete Kibuff, George Stier, Zach Wheat, Mack Wheat, Becker and Packard. The "Nationals" are Douglas Baird, Max Carey, Casey Stengel, Roger Hornsby, Hal Chase, Riggert, Tierney, Snyder and Grover Cleveland Alexander. The "Nationals" won the game in Kansas City, 4 to 2, the pitchers being Johnson and Alexander.

SUSPENSION OF WORLD SERIES IS UNLIKELY

Post-Season Classic Will Probably Be Carried Through Despite War.

The report that the World Series next fall may be declared off because of the war is not to be taken seriously. President Ban Johnson's announcement that the American League is ready to stand by the Government to a finish in any contingency that may arise is not taken to mean that the league is anticipating the calling off of the blue ribbon event. A declaration by President Tenor of the National League, in which he foresees no need of calling off the series if the playing seasons are finished, seems to voice the sentiment of baseball men in general. Information gathered with the regard to the effect of conscription on the major leagues, indicates that none of the contending teams will be broken up. In case drafted players are ordered to concentration camps prior to the close of the season it is said the club owners are prepared to go through without them. The playing of the World Series seldom requires more than eight or nine days, and baseball men are inclined to believe that its playing would scarcely conflict with any plans of the Government for calling players of the two pennant winning clubs into service. That the major leagues stand prepared to assist the Government in every way possible is assured by military training given the players, donations to the Red Cross by various clubs and repeated assertions by magnates and players of their willingness to render assistance. In the last analysis the matter will be left entirely to President Wilson, and it is not at all likely that he will recommend suspension of the World Series. Should Mr. Wilson, however, really want the games stopped the two major leagues will cheerfully yield to his request. At this time, however, it is not conceivable on what grounds President Wilson can ask for the suspension of a series which requires little over a week for its completion.

FITZ'S SECOND SON PROMISING BOXER

Bob, Jr., Disappointment, But Martin May Wear Late Father's Mantle

New York boxing fans regard Martin Fitzsimmons as the fighting member of the Fitzsimmons family. Martin is the youngest son of the late Bob Fitzsimmons, middleweight and heavyweight champion of the world. When old Bob was alive he always regarded his eldest son, Bob, jun., as a great boxer. But those who know say that Bob, jun., is muscle bound and cannot hit. Furthermore, he doesn't want to be a boxer. Martin Fitzsimmons is only nineteen years old. He is heavier than his father was in his prime, weighing about 180 pounds. He is shorter than old Fitz, standing about 5 feet 10 inches. Dan McGinnity, Bob Fitzsimmons' closest friend, says that Martin is a good boxer. He has not appeared in the ring professionally, but is continually boxing just for the fun of it. And they say that the nineteen-year-old lad has a fair imitation of his father's left-hand wallop.
