To help the dear boys "who went across." Everybody at home is expected "to come across." And the big noise was to arouse the citizens to their duty. For five minutes Kingston never heard such an uproar in all its history. It far exceeded the jubilation the world has yet known. He said

It was a conglomeration of sounds that drew the populace to their Canada is the announcement made doors in wonderment, while flashes here to-day. The committee has been of warm emotion swept over many in communication by wire with mostsouls. The tune was the same, national, patriotic uplifting, "Buy, Victory Bond" was the song of the noisy tooters, the victory voices.

As Mayor Hughes said at a meeting the other night "the balloon will go up on Monday," and there was just as much excitement as when balloon goes up, and a whole lot more besides. But to-day's noise will be as nothing compared to the noise that will continue for the next three weeks.

big cause and that the campaign ing to push forward in some sectors. will be a success goes without saying.

The Noise Begins.

Sharp at 9 o'clock Big Ben tolled out from the City Hall tower, and almost immediately, all the whistles and belis all over the city got busy. And it was certainly some noise There were few people who were not in on the game, and those who had been too busy to read the particulars of the campaign, were under the impression that perhaps the war was over, peace had been declared, and that the whistles and bells were being used as a form of celebration. "What's all this noise about?"

one woman was heard to remark. "Why, the Victory Loan," said a youngster, who happened to hear the remark. "This is the week we give the money to help win the war. I'm in on this. 'My father is putting up something for me, as I am not old enough to earn money, and you can just bet that I am glad to have a share in this thing."

There was one siren whistle that was most attractive. Its wild tone bespoke victory for the campaign. The idea was a good one, and certainly stirred the people for the occasion. Added to the noise of the bells and the whistles, automobile horns were also blown, and for ten minutes or more it was as if bediam itself had been let loose. For its size, Kingston made as much noise as any place. There was great en-Everyone was delighted with the start the campaign was given, and from now on it will be a case of then give again. Give your money ment. to the canvassers with the smile of the Sunny Jim variety, and this will (Continued on page 6.)
