The Theatres

At The Grand.

A large and representative audience greatly enjoyed a very select programme of meritorious pictures and feature vaudeville at the Grand last night. Of course the main drawing card was that peerless emotional actress, Mme. Petrova, in the five-act Metro Wonderplay, "The Death." It is a thrilling, convincing drama of Corsican life, full of suspense, action, magnificent scenes and artistic illustrative detail. Mme. Petrova as Bianca Sylvia, the young lace-maker with a talent for sculpturing, has probably never had a part in which she looks so stunning, or reveals so much of her wonderful emotional talent. There is also an interesting and historical two-reeler, "Pioneer Days," a rib-ticking Hans and Bud comedy, "The Efficiency Experts," and "The Easter News." The Tianita Midgets are two very versatile little people and provided some clever comedy with their burlesque boxing.

"The Bird of Paradise."

In "The Bird of Paradise," which will be seen at the Grand Opera House, to-morrow matinee and night is a big play that grips the heart and brings the sob to the voice. Richard Walton Tully has spent years on the peaks that rise out of the warm waters of the South Pacific and the claim is made that the tropical atmosphere of our distant insular possession is faithfully reproduced in "The Bird of Paradise." Oliver Morosco's stage settings have received unstinted praise for their truthfulness. A native Hawaiian band of singers will sing the plaintive Ika-hua and other songs of the South Seas during the action of the play.

At Griffin's.

Winsome Marguerite Clark charmed an unusually large audience at Griffin's last night appearing in the fascinating and quaint photoplay "Bab's Diary." Bab resents the way she is treated by her family, who keep her in the back ground, while her sister only twenty months older than herself is allowed to do as she pleases. She decides to give them something to worry about. She invented a boy's name, that sounded like a patented malted milk label. It did worry her trusting family. Bab caused a world of costing when she appeared in the Saturday Evening Post—she'll be the rage of the town after this wonderful picture is shown.

Valeska Suratt the "Empress of Fashion" held the audience spell-bound last evening when she appeared in her greatest success, "The Slave." Gowns of surpassing beauty never before seen, and such a wonderful array, at least fifty different costumes are some of the attraction to be seen in "The Slave." These two features make a truly great bill, which will be repeated to-night and to-morrow matinee and night.

At the Strand.

At the Strand last night a satisfied audience witnessed the presentation of "Fighting Odds," with the famous film beauty and star, Maxine Elliott in the title role. "Fighting Odds" was specially staged for the star; a splendid vehicle to develop exceptionally excellent dramatic powers in a beautiful role. The rapidly increasing automobile industry is made the basis for a story of powerful intrigue and trickery on the part of conscienceless men, and of the loyalty and perseverance of a beautiful woman, to outwit the conspirators and bring them to justice. Miss Elliott has several splendid emotional scenes and to them she does full justice. The Canadian Topical Review, and several good reels of comic stuff were shown. The whole series of films to be seen to-night and to-morrow.

OBITUARY

The Late Sidney Scobell.

Sidney W. Scobell, a resident of Syracuse, N.Y., for thirty-five years and formerly of Kingston, died at his home 1023 Avery avenue on Monday morning, Nov. 12th after a lingering illness of eight months. He is survived by his widow, Annie Tiscus, a daughter, Helen Vivian, three brothers and three sisters. The remains were brought to Kingston and burial took place at St. Mary's cemetery, Wednesday morning. The late Mr. Scobell had many friends in Kingston who mourn his death.

The Late Mrs. Chrisley.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Patrick Chrisley took place from her late residence on Thursday morning at ten o'clock, and was largely attended. The service was conducted at her home by Rev. Mr. Topping. There are left to mourn her loss three sons and four daughters; James at home; Thomas and George of Inverary; Mrs. Bates of Dexter, N.Y.; Mrs. Spooner, Rentrew; Mrs. Clark, Battersea; Mrs. Smith, Elginburg. The remains were placed in the vault at Sand Hill.

In His Eighty-fifth Year.

Hon. Justice B. M. Britton, who is the trial judge in the case of Basil vs. Spratt, is in his eighty-fifth year. Though feeble physically there is no keener judge presiding in Ontario to-day. The counsel can testify to that, for not the minutest detail escapes his Lordship's observation. For the information of the younger generation who may not know about it, Justice Britton represented Kingston in the House of Commons from 1898 until 1902 when he was elevated to the bench.
