GENERAL POST—Après La Guerre.

The following article was written exclusively for The Whig by D. L. Berwick, lately returned from the front. The Kaiser shouted "General Post." The world in general has answered to this command, and the question now asked is—How will it affect the social and financial condition of all the fighting nations après la guerre? Ever since the war started Mr. Smith, the tailor, and Mr. James, the shoemaker, and so on, reverted from their position to don the King's uniform and the once stuck-up, conceited puppy of the so-called aristocracy found himself in a position on which he was forced to be very anxious to get his name on the Voters' List have so far been unable to find out really what has been done in their case. For instance, the enumerator for No. 16 Rideau Ward is J. Wilson, who lives at 292 Division street, according to the list issued by J. B. Walker, Deputy Returning Officer. When several Richardson supporters went up to call on Mr. Wilson in the evening to see if he had placed their names on the list they found that 292 Division street was a vacant lot, upon which Mr. Wilson had not even pitched a tent or erected a signboard. These voters immediately considered that there was something radically wrong in the appointments. Upon placing the matter before Mr. Walker, the Whig was informed that the wrong street number had been given. It should have read 392 instead of 292 Division street. Other voters who had gone to the Army and Navy Veterans' Association rooms on Princess street to look for enumerators who had their headquarters there were unable to find any trace of the men. This was quite likely to occur, because many of these enumerators are obliged to work evenings in order to cover their territory in the allotted time. After their work has been performed and their revised lists have been prepared there will be a period of four days, that is, from Dec. 3rd to Dec. 7th, during which the lists will be posted at the homes or headquarters of each enumerator, and also at the headquarters of each candidate. Every voter who wishes to make sure that his name is on the list can inspect the lists then and enter an appeal if his name has been omitted. These appeals will be presented by either the representatives of Mr. Nickle or Mr. Richardson, as the Richardson's supporters are criticizing the manner in which the enumerators are doing their work and the difficulty there is in securing information as to very many voters to get their names on the Voters' List have so far been unable to find out really what has been done in their case.

After the war the different organizations of brotherhood among fighting men will take the place now controlled by unions, and this brotherhood will be of such a binding nature that the working man who hitherto has been under the mailed fist of Mr. Money Bags will find himself released. We hear speakers day after day dwell on the words "Prussian Militarism," "Crush it," they say! Sure, we are all fighting to crush Prussian Militarism, but let us remember that while we are fighting with this aim in view there will be a greater and far more destructive menace to erase before the men who have fought can reap their dues, and that is the abolition of aristocracy and the promotion of democracy.

He expressed the opinion that the working people, through their representatives, would be the chief factors in deciding this war should peace proposals be submitted. If this were to happen it would be the greatest victory that the working people could achieve, and God help the Kaiser, for we won't.
