Books And Their Authors

THE DWELLING PLACE OF LIGHT.

By Winston Churchill. 462 pages. Price, $1.60. The Macmillan Company, Toronto, publishers.

As a critic of life and society as he finds them in his own United States, Winston Churchill has developed amazingly during the past few years. Always a painstaking and careful novelist, he has now brought his genius to bear upon the grim realities of modern social and industrial life.

This, in a word, is the framework upon which Churchill has constructed his latest book, "The Dwelling Place of Light." In it he reveals all the longings, the dissatisfaction and the desires of a soul "cribbled, cabined and confined," one which, putting behind her traditions and training of a highly respected and Puritanical New England family, yields to the temptation of one who holds before her fascinated gaze the picture of comfort and ease and, as she afterwards discovers, illicit love.

While Churchill is masterly in his skill in handling the tale of a betrayed love, he has dodged the issue indicated by himself. His heroine makes her escape, but she leaves behind her the problem still unsettled. There still remain the poverty-stricken tenements of the industrial workers, the sordid surroundings, the menace of the foreign-born, and all the dangers that result from these conditions.

AMERICA AT WAR.

By Prof. W. F. Osborne. 196 pages. Price, $1.25. The Mussion Book Co., Toronto, publishers.

In April last Prof. Osborne, of the University of Manitoba, went to Washington as the special correspondent of the Winnipeg Free Press. The articles that he wrote for that paper about our cousins across the line, have now been gathered together in book form.

Conscription finds a hearty champion in Prof. Osborne. He had observed its workings in the United States, and found it altogether beneficial. To quote his conclusions: "As a by-product of the war, great national advantage will accrue to the United States as a result of its participation. Upon the vast, conglomerate America that has grown up since the Civil War, the seal of a unified Americanism will now finally be set.

A Reaching Out For God.

I want said the Bishop, to know about God. Slowly through four long years I have been awakening to the need of God. I grew up in the delusion that I knew God; I did not know that I was unprovisioned and unprovided against the tests and strains and hardships of life.

You see, I am but a common sort of man. I have neither lived nor thought in any way greatly. I have gone from one day to the next day without looking very much further than the end of the day.

Medical Organization.

Each battalion at the front has a headquarters, usually in a dug-out or a sheltered farm house, close to the line, each brigade, consisting of four infantry battalions, has a headquarters, consisting of three infantry brigades, artillery, etc., has a divisional headquarters in some town still further to the rear, out of shell range, each corps, comprising two to four divisions, has its headquarters in a town back of this again; each army, composed of two to four corps, has its headquarters still further to the rear, and the popular idea of the Tommy is that the respective headquarters occupy bigger and bigger chateaux the farther back they go.

MARRIAGE

By H. G. Wells, 490 pages. Thomas Nelson & Sons, Ltd., London and Toronto.

Any book by Mr. Wells is bound to be interesting because he brings to the task of writing high literary attainments. There is in this book a great deal that is penetrating and finely imaginative. He has clothed a time-old subject with the garb of modernity.

The Man on Watch

It looks as if money will be the last consideration of voters in the coming election. What a change!

Are Street, Spankie et al showing the farmers of Frontenac how to water their bacon like Flavelle did his? Of course Flavelle was only trying to perform the miracle of the loaves and fishes.

The annual meeting of Kingston's Curling Club appears to the Lampman to be like a continued story. There are three parts to it, and the third is yet to come.

The Lampman wonders if a joyful noise, as mentioned by the psalmist, is contrary to Kingston's noise by-law. How would Magistrate Farrell decide this point?

There are no more kids on the streets after hours these nights than there were before the curfew ceased to ring. The curfew law is just as well obeyed without the bell as with it. Of course that is not saying much.

say, the scene shifts to the bleak and barren wastes of Labrador, with a Trafford wounded and well-nigh dead. Just here the latent loyalty of woman for "her man" reveals itself, and she tugs her all at his feet. Marjorie had found herself. In the hour of ease she had failed ignobly; in the day of adversity she had risen to noble heights and saved them both. How like the experience of most of womankind!

Among the Magazines.

Sure of Russia's Future.

Events in Russia have of late so stumbled on one another's heels that the Canadian's natural mood is one of bewilderment. It is hard, among conflicting reports, to judge the true state of affairs, still harder to predict the future. For it is only on the basis of first hand knowledge of the Russian people that any conjectures are possible on this question.

New Idea in Home Planning.

Our architects are gradually learning that after all in said and done the thing worth while is to make a home that is attractive, in which people will return with delight.

Kicking up the Dust of Ages.

How many of us realize what wondrous scenery there is to be found in many sections of this country—especially if one is willing to desert the usual by-ways and seek out the less beaten paths, leading to something really worth while.

decided to take the money and invest it in something that will turn up Huns.

According to Harry Lauder, the Huns are absolutely without mercy. Then they are not referred to in the beatitude. "Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy."

It looks as if we are to have one of the old-fashioned winters which used to set in during the latter part of November. Perhaps we may also have summer in its proper appointed time next year.

"God bless Cataragui!" is to be an emblem over the dining room door of Ongwanada military hospital. Cataragui ladies have graciously come to the front with jam and pickles for that institution.

It must be a rude jolt to the Irish to hear that they are losing the supremacy of the ring. However, that does not mean that the Irish are going to quit fighting. Not on your life. When Irishmen quit fighting there will be no more Ireland and Irishmen.

Now that it has been demonstrated how much money the people of Kingston and Frontenac have lying about, by their investment in Victory bonds, the churches will now start a little campaign to see if they can get a portion of what remains.
