That CHRISTMAS, the season of good cheer is not far away? When giving, why not give something worth while. The day of useless foolish gifts is past. To conserve the nation's energies we must spend our money to the best advantage. The merchandise that we carry is one of the most useful things in the world, for it makes for home and all that implies. To enumerate a few articles that will make acceptable gifts:

Kiddie Kars for the children, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50; mirrors for the bath room, the hall, the drawing room; rugs for every purpose; chesterfields, divanettes, brass beds, down quilts.

ACT WORTHY OF MEDAL INCIDENTS OF THE DAY

SIXTEEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL MADE RESCUE OF D. McEWEEN.

At Risk of Her Own Life, She Succeeded in Pulling Him Out of the Water, When He Was Almost Exhausted.

Further particulars have been received by The Whig, regarding the drowning of Ralph Knapp and the narrow escape Daniel McEwen had near Mud Lake a few days ago. The information is given in a letter written by Mrs. McEwen.

The two men started out with shot guns to shoot some geese belonging to Mr. McEwen. The geese had been up the lake about three weeks, and had become so wild that it was found necessary to shoot them. The two men crossed over the ice on Mud Lake in safety, and then after walking about a half a mile on land, started to cross over a small bay, where they thought they would locate the geese, when they broke through the ice, not far from the shore. Both went under and found it impossible to call for help for a minute or so. They were surrounded with ice, and found it impossible to get out. Both were heavily clothed and this made matters worse. Mr. McEwen is an excellent swimmer, but Mr. Knapp could not swim very well. Both men put up a hard fight for their lives, but Knapp soon became exhausted, and sank before his companion's eyes.

Mr. McEwen got his mitts off, and endeavored to get hold of a piece of ice, but many times he lost his hold. He kept calling for help all the while. However, he managed to hang on till help came.

Louise Badour, aged sixteen, daughter of John Badour, who lives about a half mile from the scene of the accident, heard his cries for help. She ran down to the shore, and with a younger sister, got a long cedar pole, and held it out to McEwen. He tried to take hold of the pole, but his hands were so cold that he could not keep his hold. McEwen sank, and the girl screamed, as she thought he was gone. He came up again, and again made an attempt to take hold of the pole which was stretched out to him.

"I threw my left arm over it," says McEwen, "and held it as tightly as I could to my side, and in this manner the girl succeeded in pulling me out of the icy waters. The girl did not know an person had been drowned, until after I got out. The younger girl stood back crying, and clapping her hands, and calling to her sister to come back, telling her that she would get into the water, too, but she did not heed her."

Mr. McEwen states that the act is one worthy of special attention, and he is very anxious that steps be taken to secure a medal for the young heroine.

William Badour, a relative of the girl, who made the rescue, arrived on the scene shortly afterwards, and assisted in getting McEwen to the Badour home, where he remained until he recovered from the shock.

The body of Mr. Knapp was recovered about three hours after. The remains were buried in Bolingbrook cemetery. Knapp was twenty-two years old, while McEwen is twenty-four. The shot guns owned by the men were lost in the bay. William Jones and D. Badour recovered the body of Knapp.

Rev. Mr. Doherty conducted the funeral service for the late Mr. Knapp, and paid a touching reference to the deceased, who was a man of strong character. Relatives and friends filled his late home to overflowing at the service. He is survived by his father and mother, two sisters and four brothers.
