A FAMOUS ARTIST.

Mrs. Stanhope Forbes Was a Native of Kingston.

It is perhaps not generally known that Elizabeth Adela Stanhope Forbes was a Canadian and was born at Kingston, Ont. After studying at the Art Students' League in New York under William M. Chase, Elizabeth Armstrong, as she was then, went to England for further study and there married Stanhope Forbes, R.A., and settled down at Newlyn, the famous art colony in Cornwall. It was at Newlyn that Mrs. Forbes painted her many pictures of Cornish scenery and types woven into fairy tales of local legends which increased steadily in power until she became recognized as one of the most brilliant artists of the day. It was at Newlyn, too, that she opened, with Mr. Forbes, the famous art school which bears their name, and which has given so many young artists a sound grounding in the essentials of their craft and an outlook upon nature and life all the more joyous and free in surroundings in this regard.

Academy drawings are up to the approach of women painters, even in these stirring days, and with some unconscious humor the male mind seems to demand a higher qualification from the women artist than from his own for admittance to his order—otherwise it is difficult to account for the exclusion of such painters as Annie Swynerton and Laura Knight, not to mention others. It was so with Mrs. Forbes, and while for many years her pictures were warmly welcomed to membership were unrecognized by the Royal Academy. The Royal Water Color Society was not so exclusive and honored her work with a merited associateship. Mrs. Forbes also won honor at the Paris Exhibition in the year of her marriage and later became a member of the Royal British Colonial Society of Artists formed to bring together the art of the islands with the overseas dominions.

Up to the time Mrs. Forbes passed away, in the maturity of her powers, the National Gallery of Canada possessed only one example of her art, a water color entitled 'A May Evening,' in which a group of village children are picking flowers on the hill above Mount Bay. The National Gallery naturally felt that a better representation of the work of one of the foremost artists Canada had produced was imperative, and the result was that an important oil painting, 'When Daffodils Begin to Peep,' was purchased and in accordance with the generous desires of Mr. Forbes and his son to commemorate Mrs. Forbes' connection with Canada, the purchase price of the picture was paid over to the Canadian Red Cross Society and the Young Men's Christian Association work in France.

But this was not all. Mrs. Forbes was an accomplished etcher and the National Gallery desired to obtain examples of her work in medium, and the desire was satisfied by Mr. Forbes in a most magnificent way by the presentation of no less than two additional water colors, three color studies for illustration, fifteen etchings, and three charcoal drawings. Mrs. Forbes' representation in the national collection of her native country is now a wide and interesting one and it is hoped that as soon as the National Gallery recovers its lost premises a memorial exhibition of the artist's work will be held, with the addition of such pictures as are in the possession of private owners.

The Real "War Bread" must contain the entire wheat grain—not the white flour center—but every particle of gluten and mineral salts—also the outer bran coat that is so useful in keeping the bowels healthy and active. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the real "war bread" because it is 100 per cent. whole wheat prepared in a digestible form. Contains no yeast, baking powder, seasoning, or chemicals of any kind. Food conservation begins with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for breakfast and ends with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for supper. Delicious with sliced bananas, berries, or other fruits. Made in Canada.

Mrs. Forbes' art was essentially normal, sane and strong. Dealing, as to much of it did, with her Cornish surroundings, with their clear, bright colors, it developed a corresponding quality of paint which aided by forceful draftsmanship, gave her imagination its visible message.

The difference of the machine and feminine qualities in terms of art has been insisted upon with suspicious vehemence, indicative of a corresponding paucity of truth. There can be no essential differences in men's and women's art, and the greater progress either man or woman seems to make in any line of human endeavor, the more beautifully less become any characteristics that are sexual. It was so with Mrs. Forbes' work, which has been dubbed masculine, probably because the unconscious egotism of the male critic has seen in it qualities of color and draftsmanship unusual in a woman, and thereforeavoring of some high or affinity. May we not expect the day when any special quality of refinement in the work of a man will be dubbed feminine by the woman critic? Be that as it may, Mrs. Forbes' work in painting and in etching possessed a strength and vitality which, coupled with an equally characteristic grace and refinement, placed it in a position where it means that it all comes on equal terms and is judged as a masterly achievement.

Married an Heiress.

The marriage of Miss Gertrude Langtry, adopted daughter of Frederick W. Vanderbilt, of New York, and Lance-Corporal Loqueuil, of the Canadian army, son of a professor in Oporto University, is announced in the London Daily Mirror. The bride said her parents had not yet heard of the wedding, which took place at Seaford, and which was extremely quiet, only a few witnesses being present. The bride gave the name of Vanderbilt, which she said she was authorized to use. The girl said she became acquainted with Corporal Loqueuil while riding along the seashore. Becoming ill, she was obliged to dismount. Loqueuil happened to come along, assisted her with the utmost kindness, and the acquaintance ripened into mutual love.

I had wakened out of my first sleep, even had been asleep only five minutes. I would lie awake for hours and could not get to sleep again. Any sudden noise or a door slamming would set my nerves going, and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I did not try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I could at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefited me so much that I have taken fully a dozen boxes. My nervousness or fidgety feeling in the limbs is entirely cured.
