"GET THE BIG IDEA FIXED."

Bible without expecting to understand it as they understand the newspaper. Their knowledge of Mesopotamia is as hazy as their knowledge of the Hittites, or the lands of Paul's journeys. A Sunday school teacher who exhibited with pride a map of Bible lands showing Ur of the Chaldees as down in the land of Edom was not very much embarrassed when the mistake was pointed out. The assumption is that all that pertains to the Bible is somewhat vague and conjectural. One does not expect to comprehend the Bible as he does a book of travels or a history or a novel.

That state of mind was given a severe jolt by Ezra, who in this great Bible-reading assembly had the law read so that the record runs, "And they read in the book of the law distinctly, and gave the sense, so that they understood the reading." No other book is read so unintelligently as the Scriptures. Philip's question as the Ethiopian eunuch might well be repeated to many a Christian at his private devotions, "Understandest thou what thou readest?"

Often the Bible is treated as a sort of charm or incantation, to be read because there is virtue in it, but not because it is understood. Some folk, following this good-luck method, open their Bible at random for their daily reading, trusting to be guided thereby, though it is usually the bookbinder and not the Spirit who determines the pages at which the volume will open most easily. The only Bible reading that is worth the time spent upon it is Bible reading which gives the reader the sense of what he has read. Otherwise, one might as well read last year's almanac, or a volume of cuneiform inscriptions.

The Speaker Who Made a Hit.

At a great Philadelphia convention a few years ago a professor in Haverford College read the Scripture lesson, I have forgotten even the names of the distinguished speakers of the evening, but I have not forgotten how Rufus M. Jones read the thirteenth chapter of Corinthians, as if it were living literature, and as if it meant every word. That, I fancy, is the sort of reading of the Pentateuch which the multitude of Jews alongside of the water gate heard that day so long ago.

Small wonder that they wept and shouted "Amen!" and bowed themselves to the earth in contrition, and listened for dear life for six short hours. No sermons are long when they are messages of life, from living men to living men. Emotions? Of course there was emotion. There is always emotion when the hearts are deeply stirred. There is emotion when a man tells a woman of his love. There is emotion over the birth of the first-born. There is emotion at the death-bed. There is emotion when a country's call is heard by patriots. The stirring of the deep always produces emotion, and the academic objection to emotion in connection with religion is little less than absurd.

The lesson of this whole lesson is obvious. It is that the surest way to the most abiding religious revival is by the study of the word of God. Give the people the Book and they can do without any evangelist. The entrance of the Word gives light and life and fortitude and conviction and lowliness and peace. The people who have come upon a revival of Bible study have the best reason to be glad and grateful, as the Jews after the festival of study of the law. They celebrated because they had learned anew the Pentateuch; how much greater should be the celebration of those who have the living Gospel as their light and their strength!

TO NATIONALIZE MEDICAL PROFESSION

So That Nobody Will be Prevented From Obtaining the Best Attendance.

London, Dec. 5.—Dr. Christopher Addison, Minister of Reconstruction, according to the Daily Express, has been appointed Minister of Public Health, and hopes to carry a bill through Parliament before Christmas forming a new Ministry to operate a scheme of "revolutionary character." This scheme is said to aim at the nationalization of the medical profession, involving free medical attendance for everyone without any element of charge.

Premier Lloyd George, the Express adds, believes the time is ripe for a change, holding that nobody should be prevented or deterred from obtaining the best medical attendance on the score of cost or charity.

LAVERGNE UNPOPULAR.

Greeted With Nicknames by Nasty Crowd.

Quebec, Dec. 5.—Shouts and nicknames greeted Armand Lavergne, the Nationalist leader, who is an independent candidate in the County of Montmagny running in the federal election against the Unionist and the Liberal candidates. Some of the crowd were heard above the turmoil to shout: "It's your fault that Borden is in power to-day. Why did you fight Laurier?"

Your pity for these

The chubby babies—the hard-working wives—the feeble old folk of the British or Canadian sailor—what can he do for them when he himself is broken or maimed, drowned or blown up, at his perilous calling?

Nothing. His wage is pitifully meagre. His life hard. There are no pensions or "allowances" as in the army.

One hundred and forty five British ships sunk without a trace—"spurlos versenkt" is the infamous phrase—and thousands of other sunken ships have taken their toll of brave sailor men—

Yet never a British sailor has refused to sign on for another ship. They know of the thousands and thousands of tons of supplies that must be kept moving to the boys at the front. They know that cessation of British sea traffic would be the cutting of the jugular vein of our war.

We who sleep safely at night from the Hun because of the heroic work of the Sailor amidst hidden mines and sinking murderous submarines—will we not be generous on when the Daughters of the Empire will ask for our subscriptions for the sailors of the British Navy and the Mercantile Marine. Canada's gift last year of $700,000 "for the relief of British and Canadian Sailors and their dependents, for Sailors' Homes, Institutes and Hospitals in Canada and throughout the British Empire" and for the work of the Navy League—will surely be surpassed.

Sailors' Day Dec. 8th

The Sailor gives his strength, his life, his all for us. What shall we do for him?
