CHILDREN IN WAR TIME.

Future Citizens Become Valuable

Asset of Country. War work for babies which result ed in lowering the infant death rate in Great Britain, France, Belgium, and Germany is described by Dr. Grace L. Meigs in a paper on infant welfare work in war time which the bureau has just made available for

The special features of the work have varied in the different countries. In England there has been a striking increase in the number of health visitors employed to help and to instruct mothers in the care of their babies and young children. An act providing for Government aid to local agencies had, as it happened. been passed in July, 1914.

general distribution.

"The local Government board (the central supervising and administrative body) has taken the stand that in war time, in spite of the general need for economy, no economy should be exercised in this direction. There is evidence that in a good many communities, on account of the has been solved satisfact the word, and their small ration they fails to clean the liver and bowels the authorities or voluntary agencies or to undertake new work. These difficulties the local government board has largely overcome. It has ne on with the greatest determination towards its acknowledged goal -to have systematic supervision through the work of health visitors for all babies born who need care."

The available information for Germany concerns only the first eighteen months of the war. Dr. Meigs refers to the emphasis placed on enabling mothers to care for their own children. A special committee of the Red Cross, for example, was organized in Berlin for the care of mothers and infants The committee had : fund for needy mothers which it used for those mothers who brought their babies regularly to an infant-welfare station and who took care of them in their own homes.

The outstanding feature of the creased provision for maternity care; and in Belgium, the establishment of canteens for the feeding of mothers and of young children.

Dr. Meigs speaks of the important part played by the military separation allowances which are granted by foreign governments to the wives of enlisted men, either, as in Great Britain and Canada, to the wives of all soldiers, or, as in France and Germany, to the wives who are in need because the family's wage-earner has been called to the colors.

Furthermore, in each of these countries except Belgium a maternity benefit from Government funds, provided before the war to certain listed men or all women who are receiving the military separation allow-

The chief preventive measure for intelligent care and nursing by healthy mothers in their own homes. Nothing should be considered mor important in war time than the strengthening and extending of preventive work already established for infant and maternal welfare.

Who Opened Lusitania's Safe?

When the Lusitania was torpedoed y a German submarine off the coast of Ireland, with the loss of 1,100 other rich freight, a consignment of diamonds in transit from New York to London, upon which the Union nsurance Company of Bangor, Me., carried a risk of $13,610.

The company promptly paid the claim, and entered the $13,000 in its built about 315 B.C. on the site of loss account. But, it now appears, long after the great disaster, the insurance company received a London draft for the full amount of its risk. with the information that the diamonds had been recovered

An Irish fisherman, upon bauling his trawls; found that he had booked the most valuable fish in his careera small package, which bore plainly enough the address of a firm of London jewelers, and which upon exam ination was found to contain dia monds-the gems upon which the Bangor Insurance Company, among others, carried risks. The fisherman got his due amount of salvage, and the diamond merchants were glad to return the insurance money. The puzzle is: Having presumably been locked up in the purser's safe, how did the diamond packet get loose so that it came up on the fisherman's trawl?
