Cornwall Streets Lighted Again; Normal Conditions Soon.

Cornwall, Feb. 9.—After five or six nights of darkness the street lights are on again and there is now a good prospect of normal conditions being restored in a few days so far as the electrical power supply of the town is concerned.

Mr. Poste, the superintendent of the St. Lawrence Power Company, and his staff, have made a record in getting the plant at Mills Reeves in operation again after the havoc made by the ice jam and flooding of the power house. After the machinery had been cleared of ice and water by the use of artificial heat, the work of drying out was expedited and in two days one of the generators was in operation again. This gave sufficient power for the street lighting and ordinary power service to be resumed. The other generator will be ready for use in three or four days, when all demands can be fully supplied.

In the meantime the industries that were handicapped by the shortage of power are again in operation. The water is now down to almost summer level, which enabled the Stormont Electric Light and Power Company to supply current without interruption, and no further trouble is looked for.

THE SACRED KREMLIN.

Russian Rioters Lose All Sense of Reverence.

The Petrograd correspondent of The Daily Telegraph in writing of the riots in Moscow in the recent past, says:

"It is difficult to believe that Russian hands have destroyed the Cathedral of the Assumption and the lower Ivan Vekki. These two buildings were the very heart of the Kremlin and were to Moscow what St. Mark's and the Campanile are to Venice. They had looked down on centuries of Russian history, and seemed to form an almost living link between the past and the present.

It was in the cathedral that the Tsars were crowned, and in former days the patriarchs were buried there. In conformity with its august national uses, it was a treasure house of sacred relics and priceless works of ecclesiastical art. Here were kept the shroud of Christ, a robe worn by the Virgin, one of the nails of the True Cross, and a picture said to have been painted by St. Luke.

"It would hardly be an exaggeration to say that the interior walls were incrustated with gold and jewels. There is said to have been 11,500 pounds of the precious metal in the ikonostas, the altar vessels and other objects which adorned the cathedral. This treasure was looted by the French in 1812, but was recovered by the Cossacks, who commiserated the cathedral by presenting the cathedral a silver candelabrum weighing 880 pounds.

"Like many of the most prominent features of the Kremlin, the building was the work of a foreign architect. Its designer was a Hologness named Fioravanti. Erected in the last quarter of the 15th century, it had suffered much in wars, foreign and civil, but it had always been restored on the original lines.

The tower of 'John the Great' was completed in 1609 by Boris Godunoff, and was 250 feet high. It consisted of five stories, all octagonal except the top one, which was round. In it were hung 33 bells, the largest of which weighed 65 tons. The French seriously damaged the tower in 1812 by tearing down the gilded roof which crowned the dome. In the mistaken notion that it was made of solid gold, few visitors can have left Moscow without climbing to the top of Ivan Vekki to see the wonderful view of the city and the surrounding country which is to be had from the top of it.

The Cathedral of St. Basil is one of the architectural curiosities of the world. It is crowned by a forest of onion-shaped domes, which are as varied in hue as in size. The colors have the one thing in common that they are all extraordinarily vivid, and the idea is current that their brilliancy is due to some process of making enamel the secret of which has been lost. The interior of the building is almost as strange as the exterior. It consists of 11 chapels, some of which are as dark as vaults, grouped together in such a way as to recall the ramifications of a rabbit warren. The building was designed by a Russian architect, and was begun in 1555 by Ivan the Terrible to commemorate the conquest of Kazan. It stands on the Red Square outside the battlement walls of the Kremlin.

"The bells were so sacred in the eyes of Russians that the outrage done to them will send a shudder of horror through the whole land."

GREAT WAR VETERANS PROTEST AGAINST PRICE INCREASE

Advocate the Payment of Post Discharge Pay to Members of the Permanent Force.

The weekly meeting of the Great War Veterans Association was held on Friday evening. Twenty new members enrolled during the week. Col. C. N. Perrean, commandant of the Royal Military College, has taken a great interest in the returned men and accepted honorary membership in the G.W.V.A. An announcement was made that the new club rooms of the Association will be open to inspection by the citizens on February 23rd. Another matter brought up was a request that local members of the association refrain from communicating with the Dominion secretary directly, rather than talking up matters through the local executive first.

Indignation was expressed at the meeting at the way the citizens of Kingston were being held up on coal prices. The Association put itself on record as protesting against the manner in which the price of coal has been put up since the scarcity has become apparent. The Kingston branch is taking the matter up as a question-affecting the general community.

The Kingston branch is also taking up the matter of post discharge pay as affecting the members of the permanent force serving in the C. E. F. As the Order-in-Council stands now, members of the permanent force, when discharged from the C. E. F., are not entitled to post discharge pay. The G.W.V.A. members feel it is a very unjust discrimination against members of the permanent force, and they are doing their utmost to have this injustice remedied.

CHARGED WITH THEFT; PROVED INNOCENT

Smith's Falls Man Acquitted by Judge Scott After Trial at Perth.

Smith's Falls, Feb. 8.—From the Police Court in Smith's Falls a few days ago a case was sent up to Judge Scott for trial. It was a charge of theft preferred against Roy Shaw, of Smith's Falls, who was charged with having stolen from J. W. Gould, a farmer living about nine miles from the village of Portland on the Smith's Falls and Portland road, one horse blanket, one goat robe, two lap robes, one pair holdbacks, and one whip. The chattels were supposed to have been stolen from Mr. Gould on the night of December 21st or the morning of the 22nd.

When the house was searched and the rug found, Mr. Shaw expressed surprise at it being there, telling both Mr. Gould and Chief Phillips that he knew nothing about it, and made no claim whatever to the rug as his property, further stating that he had never been in the garret or in the cellar of his home. After leaving home on the day of the 21st, he had been absent from Smith's Falls until January 3rd, as he had visited with his mother at Lansdowne over the Christmas holidays, and on his return he had found that some person or persons had been into his home, as there was evidence that some one had been there and had gained access by pulling open the back door and pulling the hook off same, and that they had also taken something to eat, and had also slept in one of the beds. Mr. Shaw swore positively that he knew nothing whatever about the missing articles, did not know Mr. Gould and knew nothing whatever about the missing articles nor where they were.

At the conclusion of the case His Honor dismissed the charge and acquitted the prisoner.

BECOME IMPERIAL CADETS.

Fifty Canadian Non-Coms. to Enter British Service.

London, Feb. 9.—During the last month, fifty Canadian non-coms, and men were accepted by the Imperials as cadets for the Imperial Forces. Twelve entered for the Flying Corps, seven for the Naval Air Service, and about a dozen for the Tanks. Nearly five hundred Canadian rankers were selected as cadets for Canadian battalions. Such candidates, when qualified, are, as far as possible, posted to their former unit. One non-com, from each battalion in France is exchanged each month for non-com. service in England, enabling non-coms. at the front to obtain a rest in England.

Thwarting German Greed.

It is a startling fact that American, English, French and other investigators have published broadcast remedies for human ills, while Germany alone has begged her valuable information, obtained patents in other countries and accumulated wealth by trading on the misfortunes of mankind. It is necessary only to contrast the conduct of Pasteur and Ehrlich, Teutonic selfishness put the cost of a remedy for the terrible scourge of venereal diseases beyond the reach of the poor. The profits on that patent went to a factory in which it is claimed the first poisonous gas shell was manufactured. It is because of these facts that the philosophically inclined discern poetic justice in the decision of the United States Government to release German scientific secrets to American manufacturers. The present activities of the Federal Trade Commission under the trading with the enemy act mean that, while German factories that once produced remedies for the most of man's maladies are now trading on agencies for the destruction of human life, American factories are working day and night on formulas that were once German secrets in a determined campaign to capture North and South American markets which Germany had exclusive control. The policy of Berlin in provoking war with the western world has put an end at least to the most revolting example of German greed. —Thomas F. Logan, in Leslie's.

Younger Italian to Command.

The readjustment of the army commands in Italy as a result of the recent Rapallo conference which selected the veteran General Cadorna as the empire's military counselor brings a consummation long wished for here—the advancement of the younger men among the commanders. These are General Armando Diaz, 56 next month, General Bolognello, 46, and General Giardino, who will be 56 in January.

General Diaz started in the war as a junior major-general. He rose from the command of a corps to a division and then was given charge of operations in the Carso. He smashed the Solo line in August, taking five thousand prisoners. General Bolognello, a lieutenant-colonel in 1915, reached the rank of major-general after taking Sabotino and then became chief of staff of the second army. He has directed the operations of an army corps in the Middle Ionian since General Giardino was a colonel in 1915.
