

HEART WAS BAD NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear, cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of women attending to their household duties and social obligations.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 457 Bolivar St., Peterboro, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened at my shadow."

A Part of The Exercises. The Dr. MacGregor Memorial fund has now reached to over $1,700, says the Montreal Gazette.

Canadian Gets U.S. Appointment. A Washington despatch says: D. C. Porteous, of New York, secretary of the Seaboard Air Line, has been appointed assistant of John Skelton Williams, director of finance for the railroad administration.

CAN WE SCORE MILITARY WIN?

An Emphatic "Yes" But on Conditions, Says Robert Blatchford.

"WE CANNOT BE BEATEN."

BUT OUR VICTORY MAY BE THROWN AWAY.

We Can Beat the Enemy if we "Stick It."—The Enemy Knows This and He Would Trick Us Into a False Truce.

By Robert Blatchford. When the German army entered the Russian port of Riga their first care was to hang above a hundred of the Russian revolutionary leaders, to whom they owed the capture of the town.

When the German soldiers get into Glasgow and Coventry and they never will get in. I hope not. I believe not.

But who has kept them out? Not the orators nor the strikers nor the trousers.

One would imagine from the air these malignants give themselves that wars are won by votes and phrases, and not as the Huns believe, by "blood and iron."

Now there were in Italy large numbers of visionaries who rode for a fall—and got it. As the result of their noble efforts in the cause of the freedom the Huns are in possession of large and fruitful tracts of Italian soil.

Our "Democrats" who threaten to "run" Britain after the war have reckoned without the host—the Hunnish host. Here is the German idea of the kind of "Democracy" that is good for conquered nations.

No doubt the Germans will not be the only people in the New Empire, but they alone will govern. They alone will exercise political rights.

BREAK A CHILD'S COLD BY GIVING SYRUP OF FIGS

Cleanses the Little Liver and Bowels and They Get Well Quick.

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle.

on minor employments in the state. Votes! But there's the rub. Under German rule our "Democrats" will have no votes.

It is not "democratic" speeches and peace manifestoes that keep the guns of our navy and the bayonets of our army stand between us and him.

My business this week is to cheer up a good patriot who cannot take an optimistic view of the situation and to sprinkle a few crumbs of comfort amongst some of our readers who think we "can't win."

Let us begin the first glance at the German army. Ever since 1871, when the Germans beat the French—or, rather, when they beat Napoleon III. and his standing army—the German people have been afflicted sadly with "swelled head."

What are the facts? Germany won three wars. The defeat of Denmark by Austria and Prussia was about as glorious as the thrashing of a small boy by two big men.

The Lesson of Ypres. I do not wish to disparage the German army. They discipline steadily and well. They had discipline and skill. But I will stand to it that the German success in the campaign of 1870-71 was not due to the superior fighting quality of the German soldier.

Just a word for our own men. The first battle of Ypres, in which a hundred thousand British and French defeated six hundred thousand of the best German troops, with a loss to our one and a hundred shells to our one, was a finer victory than the German or Prussian army ever won in all their history.

As to the threatened push. Will the Germans ever again have such a chance as they had at Ypres? Will they have a preponderance of guns and shells? Will they have six men to our one? Then why should we believe that they can do now what their best troops failed to do with all the odds in their favor?

Let us go back again to the battle of the Marne I said. The Germans were beaten and that they knew it. And I have often been told that I made a great mistake. But there was no mistake. What happened? The Germans were out-generalled by Joffre. At the Marne their blind rush for Paris was stopped, and they were driven back on the Aisne.

Holding Out Our Terms. Very well. After the failure of the Marne and Ypres the German offensive changed into the defensive. The Germans had reached the point at which it is advisable to make peace. And I think you will find that the first German peace kite made its appearance not long after the failure of the attack on Ypres.

What has encouraged the Germans to go on? What has helped them to hold out? The success of their treachery. The betrayal of Russia, of Siberia, and Rumania has encouraged Germany to hold out—for terms. She hopes the Allies will tire, and that she will be able to beguile them into a foolish peace.

Now let us weigh the chances. There is no doubt that Germany had the best chances in the beginning. She was ready, and she had a definite plan and a central control, and she was able by surprise to carry the war into the enemy's territory and keep it there. Now the numbers of the Allies and the enemy are roughly as follows:—

The Central Powers have a population of about 142 millions. Against these (leaving out Russia), we have to put Great Britain, with her colonies, 65 millions; France, 40 millions; Italy, 36 millions. That, without counting Serbians, or Portuguese, or our own native troops, or the French colored troops, gives the Allies a total of 141 millions.

Let us say that as fighting men all the powers' troops are equal man for man. Let us assume that their losses have been equal. Let us assume that all the nations engaged are weary and more or less impoverished. We shall still find that the balance is fairly even, although we have not put into the scale the Allied navies.

At this point in the fourth year of the war, when all the combatants have lost much blood and money, and are all more or less war-weary, there

HUSBAND AND WIFE ARE BOTH GRATEFUL

John Holman Believes That Tanlac Has Saved His Life.

"I had reached the point where I felt that nothing could save me for this world much longer and, really, I don't believe I would be alive to-day if it hadn't been for Tanlac," said John Holman of 163 Chestnut street, Toronto, recently.

"Two years ago, or more," he continued, "I commenced suffering from stomach trouble and nervousness and going down hill. I had no desire for food of any kind, nothing seemed to have any taste or give me any nourishment and I was simply dwindling away to nothing."

"I suffered terribly from indigestion and my nerves were all to pieces. I haven't been able to strike a lick of work since last April. I was as weak as a baby and actually didn't have strength enough to carry a small flower put across the room. I was so unstrung that I would have nervous tremors and shake all over like a leaf in the wind. Many a night I never closed my eyes for sleep at all and was so tired and weak during the day that I could hardly drag around. I was as white as a sheet and just a complete nervous and physical wreck. I tried all kinds of medicines but kept going down until my hopes of getting well were all gone."

"My wife begged me to try Tanlac and I began taking it under protest because I didn't believe it would do me any good. But I soon found that Tanlac was different from other medicines I had taken and by the time my second bottle was gone there was a great difference in my feelings. In fact, I was so encouraged by my wonderful improvement that I kept on taking it and it has certainly done me a world of good. My appetite is great and I can eat plenty of most anything I want without feeling a sign of indigestion. My nerves are so much better that I can sleep good every night and am feeling stronger and better than I have in a long time. I don't know just how much I have gained in weight, but I do know I'm a different man already and am still improving right along. If any man had ever had reason to praise Tanlac that man is me, and Mrs. Holman and I feel very grateful for what it has done for me."

Tanlac is sold in Kingston by A. P. Chown, in Plevna by Gilbert Ostler, in Battersea by C. Clark, in Fernleigh by Erwin Martin.—ADVT.

comes upon the scene the United States of America, untroubled and untouched wealth, with no war-weariness, and with a population of 100 millions.

And my correspondents ask if we can possibly win! Can we possibly lose? If the French and British can hold the enemy with their own arms what is going to happen when the Americans come in?

All the danger is past. All the immense advantages of the superior German numbers and armament and the initial surprise is spent. When the war began we had only 80,000 men in the field, and the Germans, better armed than the French, outnumbered us by more than a million men. Yet they were held. They were beaten. They did not break through.

How are we to lose? I maintain that if Russia had been as well organized and as well prepared as Germany was, the Russians could have defeated the Central Powers single-handed. But now, reckoning the Russians as out of the war (and that is by no means certain), we have a new ally of overwhelming wealth and numbers of a great fighting spirit, of invincible energy, ready to fall upon an enemy we have hammered to good purpose for more than three years.

If We Stick It! No; we cannot be beaten. The only danger is that our victory may be thrown away, that class or party discussions or mistaken ideas about the enemy and the war may drive our Government into a hasty and inconclusive peace.

We can beat the enemy if we "stick it," and the enemy knows it. But he is an artful enemy, and unscrupulous, and he will cheat us into a false truce if we are weak enough to let him.

If our people understood; if they would not grumble about butter and sugar and haggle for wages; if they knew what the enemy is trying for; how he hates us and burns to trample on us and enslave us; if the people could be got to see that class feuds, and party feuds, and dividends and rates of pay don't matter, because we are fighting for our lives; in fact, if all the men of Britain were unselfish, as loyal, and as brave as the soldiers and the women, there would be no need to ask if we can win nor if we are willing to lose.

Three destroyers were lost the other day. They were escorting a consignment of butter. After that will any Briton calling himself a man have the face to grouse about dry bread?

I have heard men make an almost tragic fuss about the shrapnel of beer and bacon. Well, I know a boy who fought on the Somme for a shilling a day. He had been 26 hours carrying wounded. He had not had a bite or sup. He was exhausted, and when a comrade gave him a cup of tea—he cried. He did not cry for a 12 1/2 per cent. advance of wages. He did not cry for bottled beer and bacon. He cried from gratitude and physical and mental exhaustion.

Fighting for us. If we have all his pluck and goodness, as all our Jacks and Tommies have, we shall win.

Hurrah! How's This Cincinnati authority says corns dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

FORD Cars

We aimed to give good advice in urging prospective Ford buyers to place their orders for cars before an advance, and will now venture to advise those who did not order to do so at once, as there is likely to be a scarcity of Ford cars, and another advance is quite possible.
