"Isle O' Dreams."
 In these days of frothy musical plays and frivolous comedy, it is refreshing to note the return to popularity of romantic plays. The Irish play of the Chauncey Olcott type, with its humor and pathos, its beautiful Irish songs, through all the changes in fashion of plays, has never lost its interest. "The Isle of Dreams," a clean, heart-interest comedy-drama, has a great appeal for young and old. There is just the right mixture of humor and pathos and the beautiful ballads please all music-lovers. To hear Julius Velle, the young actor-singer, render "Mother Machree" is a rare treat in itself. There are no adventure of frooks, no drinking scenes, no sex problems, no crude melodrama, no A boy's suit, which must be ragged and worn, was the most important article on the list. It was made by a man's tailor, carefully fitted, pressed and creased, and he beamed with pride when he brought it himself to her dressing room during a rehearsal, then proceeded to wait until the little lady should emerge as a trim young dandy of fashion. His eyes bulged with alarm when Mitzl yanked the clothes from the box and, with her hairless Chihuahua bloodhound (about the size of a full grown rat) yapping and prancing around, the fun began. From one end of the stage to the other, she pulled and dragged the new suit over the rough boards and through the dirt, with the pup hanging on, snapping off the edges and biting holes in the cloth. The tailor could not believe his senses. He clasped his hands together and with tears rolling down his cheeks, he followed them around invoking heaven to witness the destruction of his artistic work.  Mitzl, the prima donna of "Pom-Pom," who plays the role of a roguish boy pickpocket part of the time in the opera, had the time of her life getting her clothes for the part. they were as dirty and torn as the part called for, the frolic was over, and Mitzl dashed away to insert herself into the now shabby trousers and coat, leaving her stage manager to explain. Mitzl in "Pom-Pom" will be seen at the Grand next Wednesday, March 20th, special matinee and night.

"FOLLOW ME" AT THE GRAND.

Gorgeous Production Featuring Liane Held Thursday Night.
 The patrons of the Grand this winter have had the privilege of seeing the finest lot of musical comedies that have ever been produced here. Every one has been of very marked merit. Last night Anna Held's musical comedy "Follow Me" in three acts was presented before a capacity house. This production is probably the finest, most gorgeous musical comedy yet staged to-day, and its Paris settings give it that unusual interest that attaches to plays with French color. Heading an exceedingly strong company is Liane Held, daughter of Anna Held, who shows herself as a splendid understudy of her famous mother. She fills the role of an actress in a very charming manner. Miss Held is a clever comedienne indeed. The costumes she wears are most gorgeous. Lewis Seymour, Leon Franco and Harry Bulger—the latter with Kingston family connections—are three fine comedians. Marie Fanconetti, Harry Seymour and Ida Fitzgough also take leading roles. The Ables, Held, girls and the younger dancing girls are all stunners. The latter are the cleverest and the daintiest seen at the Grand this season. The music of "Follow Me" is delightfully tuneful, and the whole production is of the kind that one would wish to see again.

GIVEN FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Men at Queen's Hospital Entertained Thursday Night.
 The men at Queen's Military Hospital were given a fine entertainment on Thursday night. Major J. P. Quigley presided. Solos were rendered by the Misses Ethel Wilson, Aneta and Ethel Sutherland, Miss Salsbury, and Miss Newland. A special feature was the songs given by Master Stuart Salsbury, who sang a number of selections in an exceedingly sweet voice. The programme also included some fine selections by Salsbury's orchestra, recitations by Seret Spargo and a doll exhibition by J. C. Prince, which was most amusing.

At the close, on motion of Major Quigley, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to all who had taken part in the programme.
 How They Kept the "Rein" off. "He's perfectly quiet, ladies," remarked the jobmaster to the two girls who were about to hire a horse and trap, "only you must take care to keep the rain off his tail."
 "We won't forget," they replied.
 When they returned the jobmaster inquired how they got on.
 "Splendidly," they exclaimed. "We had one rather sharp shower, but we took it in turn to hold the umbrella over the horse's tail, so there was no real danger."

The Barber Knew.
 Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.
 An old gentleman was being shaved by a barber who had evidently become unnerved by the previous night's dissipation. Finally he cut the gentleman's chin. The latter looked up at the man reproachfully and said:
 "You see, my man, what comes of hard drinking."
 "Yes sir," said the barber, consolingly, "it makes the skin tender."
