MEN ENTITLED TO BADGES.

The Militia Department makes the following announcement: As there appears to be some misapprehension as to who are entitled to war badges, the following points are emphasized for the information of all concerned. First, class "A" badge is issued to men who have been in service at the front, and those only. The design of class "A" badge is the same as that originally issued by the Canadian Patriotic Fund. This was decided upon in view of the strong representations that it was desired to perpetuate the design as it was already well known and highly valued by the soldiers to whom it had been issued. Second, class "B" badge is actually what is known as the "Imperial silver badge," which is awarded to British soldiers who are honorably discharged as permanently unfit for further service after serving in England or at the front. In the Canadian Expeditionary Force this silver badge is awarded not only to those who have served at the front (in addition to class "A" badge) but to those honorably discharged as unfit for further service after serving in England.
