AN EDISON PERFORMANCE

HELD IN CITY HALL ON FRIDAY EVENING.

Glen Ellison, Baritone Artist, Sang in Direct Comparison with Several Edison Records of His Voice.

Never in Kingston have the citizens had an opportunity of hearing a singer singing a duet with himself. In the City Hall on Friday evening Glen Ellison, the well-known baritone Edison artist, sang in direct comparison with several records made by Edison of his voice. At various times he stopped, but the machine proved so perfect that it continued the number, and except to those who were closely watching Mr. Ellison's lips no one could tell where he stopped or started.

The re-creation of a human voice on a machine started over forty years ago, but it is the honor of T. A. Edison to reach the goal of perfection first. In the tone-test given by Mr. Ellison on Friday evening, one realizes this very clearly. A few years ago it was a reproduction of a buzz and noise which could, particularly in rag-time music, be interpreted to mean certain words. To-day the Edison machine is so clear, so distinct and so absolutely true with the original human voice that the original artists do not fear singing a duet with themselves.

Glen Ellison is a delightful entertainer and very versatile in his musical numbers. During the evening, the records made by himself were tried on the machine, and he sang with them, always keeping the correct time and singing in a way that made it impossible to distinguish between the two voices. He sang, "When the Bonnie Heather is Blooming," "Make Your Mind Up, Maggie McKenzie," "Wee Little House That You Live In," "It's Nice to Get Up in the Morning," "Nanny," "My Bonnie, Bonnie Jean," "It's Nice When We Make It Up Again," and by request "Somewhere a Voice is Calling." To vary the excellent programme, which also included the recreated solos by well-known artists, Mr. Ellison gave two recitations which were also well received.

The Theatres

"The White Feather" To-night.

No other drama presented in years holds the close attention of the auditor as does the British Secret Service play "The White Feather," which Albert Brown will revive at the Grand to-night, as the occasion of his return to the stage. The hero of the play, "Brent," a young Englishman associated with the British War Office, to avert suspicion appears as a "silly ass," who lacks the courage to enlist, and so well does he do his part that he deceives everyone—even his sweetheart—until his task is accomplished.—Albert Brown will again appear as Brent, a role created for the run of the play in New York, and he will be supported by an all-English company, including Lenore Phelps, who will be pleasantly remembered for her portrayal of the Quakeress in "The Love of a King." Popular prices prevail to-night.

At Griffin's.

Mary Pickford, "the girl of America," continues to please an exceptionally large number of patrons at Griffin's last night in the screen dramatization of "Stella Maris," from the novel by Wm. J. Locke, who is recognized as one of the greatest living authors. For the first time in her career Miss Pickford undertakes a dual role, playing the part of "Stella Maris," a sweet, gentle girl, and Unity Blake, the ugly and deformed orphan. In the latter role scenes of great pathos and sensationalism are shown. Mary Pickford's interpretation of two separate and distinct parts, each one of stellar proportions, presents her artistry as effectively as if she had appeared in two different photographs. This evening will be the last opportunity given to see this super-fine drama, and also the Fox Kiddies in "The Babes in the Woods," a wonderfully brilliant production full of quaint charm that appeals to all. An interesting episode of "The Fatal Ring" completes the programme.

At the Strand.

Dorothy Dalton will be seen at the Strand Theatre for the first three days of next week in "The Price Mark." This is Miss Dalton's second appearance under the Paramount banner. "The Price Mark" has to do with a young girl who goes from a small Ohio town to New York city in search of a theatrical position. Failing to secure this, she is forced by ever-pressing poverty to accept an engagement as an artist's model.

From the moment that Miss Dalton, in her screen character of Paula Lee, enters that studio to the last scene of the picture, there is a romance that thrills even the most blasé theatre-goer. William S. Hart in "Horns and Hoofs," a Mack Sennett comedy and topical reels will also be exhibited, rounding out a high-class double feature bill that should please all movie fans.
