DON'T "BREAK" COLTS

It Always Pays Better to Train Them for Work.

TRAIN EARLY TO HARNESS

The Collar Must Fit Well and the Food Be Light at First — Feed Must Be Increased in Proportion to Work Done.

THERE ARE MANY colts approaching the termination of their third or fourth year, that are practically untaught, or as it is usually expressed "unbroken."

The too common practice of allowing such to go "unbroken" until such time as they are required to perform the functions of a horse in the spring, is irrational, and unfair to the animal.

Colts should not be "broken," they should be taught or educated. In the unhandled or unbroken colt, the muscular, respiratory and nervous system (the organs whose functions are taxed in the performance of the ordinary functions of a horse) are weak and undeveloped for lack of function.

When they have become reasonably handy without being hitched, they should be hitched to a wagon. Care should be taken to see that the harness fits properly. This applies especially to collars. The collars in which they are expected to work later on, should be worn. Each should have his own, and it should fit properly, not being too wide, so as to allow a rolling motion, nor yet sufficiently narrow to pinch at any point.

The colt or pair should be given daily exercise or light work, commencing with an hour or two the first day, and gradually increasing the amount until they will be able to perform a full day's reasonable exertion without showing signs of weariness.

Preparing for Gardening. This month begins the active gardening work. Hotbeds should be made and the seed of the early plants like cabbage, cauliflower, early celery, early beets, and the long season plants like tomatoes, egg plants and peppers should be started.

Hints for the Poultryman. The flock should be given the opportunity to get out of doors and exercise on fine days. Begin to make preparation for hatching. Clean up the incubators and brooders, get boxes ready for setting hens. Do not set hens in the laying pens where other birds are running.

Care of the Freshening Cow. This is the month when a large number of cows freshen. Both fresh cows and newly-born calves should receive special attention. Cows expected to freshen should be placed in a box stall for a few days before and after freshening.

Feeding the Ewe. On many farms lambs will begin to arrive about this time. If ewes have been liberally fed for a month before lambing they will likely have more milk. From 1/2 to 1 lb. of grain fed per ewe per day for a month before lambing is generally good practice.

THE EUCALYPTUS TREE

Blue-Gums Absorb Excess Water and Prevent Mosquito Breeding.

Before it was known that the malarial poison was introduced into the blood by mosquitoes it was a common practice to plant eucalyptus, or blue gum, trees in infected areas.

As is well known, the eucalyptus tree produces enormous quantities of a volatile oil that has marked antiseptic properties. The disinfecting odors exhaled by the leaves were supposed to correct the harmful vapors of the marshes. This is now known to be a totally wrong impression.

There is probably no tree having a greater avidity for water than the eucalyptus. Experiments with seedlings grown in water have shown that a baby blue-gum will take up the fluid at an extremely rapid rate.

DOCTOR URGED AN OPERATION. Instead I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Was Cured.

Baltimore, Md.—"Nearly four years I suffered from organic troubles, nervousness and headaches and every month would have to stay in bed most of the time. Treatments would relieve me for a time but my doctor was always urging me to have an operation. My sister asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before consenting to an operation. I took five bottles of it and it has completely cured me, and my work is a pleasure. I tell all my friends who have any trouble of this kind what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."

It is only natural for any woman to dread the thought of an operation. So many women have been restored to health by this famous remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after an operation has been advised that it will pay any woman who suffers from such ailments to consider trying it before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

Another Bolo Arrested in Italy

IN France the curtain has been partly lifted on the unpopular melodrama entitled "German Intrigue," but before it is rung down on the Bolo and Caillaux cases it seems likely that the world will be thrilled by the revelations. We have had a glimpse behind the scenes in the United States and in Ireland. We see what is going on in Russia, though we may have no idea how the piece is to end. In Italy, too, the thriller is about to be reproduced.

Perhaps German intrigue in Italy has had more disastrous results for the Allies than in any other country save Russia. It led to a disaster of first-class importance for the Italian army, but in Italy it seems unlikely that worse remains behind. The situation there in a military sense, is well in hand. What remains is to punish those responsible for the disaster. Already several arrests have been made, and as the case in France, the chief villain was a member of the Italian Parliament.

He will have the opportunity of proving that he did not return to Italy as a German agent, that he was not financed by Germany, and that he was not "planted" in the Italian Parliament for the purpose of playing Germany's game. Cavallini says that he was approached some years ago by a man who told him that the Khedive Tewfik, of Egypt, father of Abbas Hilmi, who was deposed by the British shortly after the beginning of the war, was in need of a loan of some $600,000, which he hoped to raise in Italy. Cavallini undertook to find the money, and approached the Bank of Italy on the matter. He was told that the money was available, but that the bank would not lend it to Tewfik. So Cavallini had the loan made to himself and signed three bills of exchange. He handed the currency over to the Khedive, who gave him as security a bag of jewels. When the bills fell due the Khedive appeared to have forgotten all about the incident. So Cavallini took them up and sold the jewels to recoup himself. He secured $800,000 for them, he says, and then went to Egypt to hand over the balance to the forgetful Khedive.

The Khedive was glad to see him and more than glad to see an extra $200,000. To reward Cavallini he made him financial adviser to the royal house, though it is not explained what the Khedive wanted with a financial adviser when he had Cromer at his service. After the war began, and when the Khedive Abbas was deposed, he went to Switzerland, and summoned Cavallini to his side. He told Cavallini that he wanted him to see Baron Sonnino, the Italian Foreign Minister, and have him press upon the British Government the propriety of appointing the son of Abbas Hilmi Khedive in his stead. Sonnino refused to see Cavallini, and thereupon the former Khedive asked Bolo to make similar effort with the French Government. Before moving in this matter Bolo insisted upon being well paid. He demanded $300,000 as the price of his efforts, and Abbas Hilmi is said to have considered the money well invested.

He sent Cavallini to France to pay Bolo his commission. Considerable secrecy surrounded the negotiations between the two men, and it has been established that an Italian baritone singer, named Sottolana, acted as intermediary and took the party of a post office for the exchange of letters. The baritone was also a witness, Cavallini says, to the payment of the $200,000. This, according to the accused Italian, is the story of his relations with Bolo. There remains to be explained, however, his intimacy with Caillaux and his wife. At this time Cavallini was living with a "Marchesa" Ricci, a woman who had no more claim to the title "Marchesa" than to the title of Cavallini's wife, in which position she passed. When Caillaux went to Italy he was entertained by the Marchesa and the Signor, and they apparently were thicker than thieves. Unless Cavallini was a German agent, it is difficult to understand his relations with such traitors as Caillaux and Bolo. The Marchesa is said to have been an intermediary between several disloyal Italian officers and the enemy. Since she was socially prominent, her arrest has created a considerable sensation. More, we understand, are to follow.
