The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

THE VEILED LADY

CHAPTER XXXI.
Evelyn did not remain long; and I did not wonder. My mind was so insistently trying to think who the veiled lady with George could be that I was very inattentive to my caller.

Evidently when George found it impossible to take me because of my red eyes, he had invited someone in my place. But Evelyn had said she was so "done up in veils as to be unrecognizable. I might have gone, had I asked George to allow me to wear a heavy veil, I thought; then I knew he never would have consented. I did wish I could do something so that I never would cry again as long as I lived, but whenever anything hurt or angered me, the tears always came in spite of everything I could do. I was what George called "the weepy kind."

I dressed carefully, and when George came in, about half an hour before dinner, my face showed no traces of tears. I ran to the door to meet him, and tried not to notice the carelessness with which he returned my kiss.

I followed him up-stairs and while he freshened up for dinner I talked to him. Finally I said: "Evelyn Reeve came over for a little while this afternoon. She came very soon after you left. She thought I was with you."

"It was your own fault that you were not!" impatiently replied George.

"She said you had some woman all done up in veils; that's the reason she thought it was I with you. She couldn't see her face."

George made no reply, but I noticed a slight scowl on his face. Foolishly I went on: "I might have gone that way. If I had worn a heavy veil my red eyes would not have shown through it."

"You may as well understand, now, that I shall not take you anywhere when you have been weeping. If you choose to make a fright of yourself you may remain where my friends do not see you."

"Who was that lady with you?" I asked, ready to weep again because of his severely uncompromising tone.

"Madge Loring—although it is none of your business."

The Call to Dinner Interrupts.
Just then Annie announced dinner and we said no more. But all through the very quiet meal—George scarcely spoke save when the butler was in the room—I kept thinking of what he had said about taking Madge Loring riding with him. Was it "none of my business," as he had declared? Was it another of those things done by society people, which I had been taught to believe not quite as fair for married people?

In our little home town it would have been a great scandal for a married man to take out another man's wife, unless his wife also was of the party. But everything in Morelands was so different. People here seemed to have a code of behavior totally unlike that of the homefolks.

Then suddenly flashed another thought: If George could go motoring with his friends, why of course I could also go out with mine! Perhaps sometime with Morton Gray. I started to say something of the kind to George, but just then the telephone rang and I had no chance.

"Who was it," I asked when he returned to the table just as James brought out the dessert.

"It was a personal call," George answered, scowling, after I had repeated the question, thinking he had not heard me the first time.

Rebuked and cowed, but also hurt at his tone, I made no further effort to talk. As soon as we finished dinner he ran upstairs and in an incredibly short time was down again, dressed in his evening clothes.

"Good night! go to bed early," he said, giving me one of his careless kisses. Sometimes I felt I would rather he would not kiss me at all; yet, even to be noticed was something—perhaps.

Evidently some one had asked him to go out, when he went to the telephone, for he had said something which gave me to understand he intended to remain home for the evening.

Carelessly I walked to the little booth under the stairs where the telephone for the first floor was installed. I had no intention of using it; no real reason to go there.

A piece of paper, torn from the little pad we kept on the wall, was on the floor where George had either thrown or dropped it. I picked it up and, smoothing it out, saw a telephone number upon it.

Was that where George had gone? I looked through the telephone book, but could not find the number, so I called up central and asked her to give me the address—I giving her the number. She did so, and to my delight it was some club. I don't know what I expected, but some-way it helped to ease the lonely gnawing to know that George was with men, and not with—Madge Loring or some other woman. (To be continued)

NEW "TWIN" SOCKS.

Can Knit a Pair of Socks on One Set of Needles.

Mrs. Frederick Welsh handed into the Red Cross Society last week the first pair of "twin" socks and has been kind enough to furnish the Whig with a copy of the instructions which can be used as a guide.

The top (the purled portion) of each sock must be knitted separately; therefore, knit this top portion of one sock in the usual manner and when that portion is finished take it off with a darning needle on to a heavy cord. Knit in a similar way the top portion of the second sock, leaving it on the needles. Then slip the first one inside of the second one and with the knitting needle take up from first one and then the other, alternating beginning with the first stitch from the needle and ending with the last stitch from the cord. Hold the sock toward you, purling the first stitch, which is from the sock that was on the needle, and knitting the second stitch, which is from the one that was on the cord; proceed with first purl and then knit, holding one thread over the first finger for purlleaves one stitch from the opposite sock, which slip on to your needle and narrow knitting. There is no slip and bind in this sock. When finished slip the needles out and take up your separate socks and bind off. In purling never put your thread over—always keep it toward you as if you are purling back on your heel.

Misrule is bad enough, but Mrs. rule is worse—so a married man says.

FARMERS BUY TRACTORS NEW RATES ON RAILWAYS

ANTHONY RANKIN, M.P., VISITS THE FORD FACTORY.
Fifty Thousand Tractors to be Completed for British Government by the First of April.

A. Rankin, M.P. for Frontenac, has returned from a visit to Detroit and the Ford factory at Dearborn, Mich., where the farm tractors are made. He states that the plant is engaged on a contract for the British Government calling for fifty thousand tractors which will be completed on April 1st. The Ontario Government has purchased fifty, and a sufficient number will be available for this season's operations on a programme for increased production. The output of the Ford plant is 50 tractors a day. The farmer does not purchase direct from the manufacturer, but sends his marked cheque to the Government, which must undertake to receive a certain number of machines in order to get any at all.

J. Sibbett, of Pittsburg, and F. Murton, Portsmouth, have each purchased one tractor. Other farmers having a large acreage tillable and unable to secure all the help required by the old methods will also be purchasers. Any land that is ploughable and is reasonably free from large stones can be ploughed by tractor, and the saving in time is of great value, particularly in the spring.

FLOOD CAUSES LOSS IN BELLEVILLE

Two Hundred People Were Removed From Homes in Boats.

Belleville, Ont., March 26.—The flood situation in this city is still serious. Yesterday afternoon a large field of ice, upwards of a mile in length, moved farther down the river, but was held when it reached the C. N. R. bridge, which spans the Moira River at its mouth. In consequence of this shove cakes of ice were carried out on the lower portion of Front street and water flooded over the street at a depth of 4 to 5 feet. Some stables and frame buildings, situated along the bank, were carried away and a large number of families were compelled to take refuge upstairs by the inflowing water. At least 200 people have been taken from the flooded districts by means of boats to homes of relatives, and friends in the city who reside above high water mark. The damage to buildings and stocks in stores will be considerably over $100,000.

PROTEST FROM GERMANS.

American Ship is Loading at the Argentine Capital.
Buenos Ayres, March 25.—The German newspapers, German citizens and such German officials as are left here are protesting vigorously to the Argentine Government against permitting an American supply ship to remain here or load meats for the American fleet. President Irogoyen, however, has informed Ambassador Stimson that the vessel may remain in port as long as may be necessary.

Possessed Banner Book.
Peterboro, March 26.—Magistrate Dumble imposed a fine of $100 each, and in default of payment six months in the county jail upon George W. Dinsdale, and John W. Boorman, whom he found guilty of having in their possession copies of "The Finshed Mystery" and "The Bible Students' Monthly."

TICKET CLERKS BUSY INFORMING THE PUBLIC OF CHANGES.

Costs $1.35 More to Make Trip From Kingston to Toronto—Reminds People They are Living in Days of War.

The travelling public are paying out more for their railway tickets these days. The new rates have been in vogue for a week now, and the ticket clerks have been having a busy time making all the necessary explanations.

The increase went into effect all over the Dominion, the new tariff schedules having been filed with the railway commissioners. As a result, people travelling have had to "dig down" into their purse or pocket for the extra dollars and cents required. The extra amount, with the war tax added on, makes the ticket buyers realize that they are living in days of war.

Entitled to Prefix "Sir."

The Order of the British Empire was instituted in June last. It follows the precedents of other similar orders and consists of five classes, and is awarded to both men and women for services rendered to the Empire at home or abroad. The first two classes, in the case of men, carry the honor of knighthood, and in the case of women the privilege of prefixing the title "Dame" to their names. Sir Charles Gordon, of Montreal was the first Canadian to receive the Knighthood of the Order of Empire in August last. The five classes of the order for men, with the letters which the different members are entitled to affix to their names, are: Knights Grand Cross (G.B.E.), Knights Commanders (K.B.E.), Commanders (C.B.E.), Officers (O.B.E.), and Members (M.B.E.). The five classes for women are: Dames Grand Cross (G.B.E.), Dames Commanders (C.B.E.), Officers (O.B.E.), and Members (M.B.E.). Sir Frank Baillie, who has recently received the Order, is president of the Canadian Aeroplanes, Limited, and a director of the Aviation Department of the Imperial Munitions Board. He was at one time private secretary of the late Senator Cox, and later was secretary of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Co., general manager of the Metropolitan Bank and senior member of the stock brokerage firm of Baillie, Wood & Croft. He organized the Canadian Cartridge Co. of Hamilton and re-founded the profits of $758,248 to the Empire for patriotic purposes.
