The three young men attended a dance in the City Hall the other night. One chap, while out for a breath of fresh air between dances, noticed a man hide a bottle behind one of the cars in the railway yards. Later on a couple of friends at the dance made the remark that they would like to have a drink. "Come with me, I know where there is some," remarked the local Sherlock Holmes. The two "dry fellows" needed no coaxing. Sherlock led the way. The bottle of whiskey was located, and one member of the party was about to put the cork when the two policemen came on the scene and spilled the beans. The bottle was dropped like a hot coal, and the boys could do was to watch the good old booze food the railway cinders.

Constables James Cotter and Daniel McCarey had the honor of cutting off what would have been a drinking party, and the trio of thirty ones were taken over to the "lock-up," where there is lots of whiskey but no cork screws to open a bottle.

There was a great deal of evidence taken in the case, but there was one part that did not hinge together very well. This was in reference to a statement one of the regular tipplers was alleged to have made, to the effect that he had a drink out of the bottle behind the box car. The man who did the talking claimed that what he did say was that he did have a drink on the night in question, but that he did not get the drink out of this particular bottle.

As a result, the magistrate gave "the boys" the benefit of the doubt, but stated that the police had prevented them from committing what would have been a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act.

T. J. Rigney appeared for the three chaps charged, and did his best to help unravel the details.

William Stevens hit the trail from Haliburton to Kingston with a bottle on his hip. He was charged with being intoxicated in a public place, and admitted the charge.

"I thought they had nothing but rocks up in your country?" said the cad to Stevens.

"We've got lots of good stuff up there," replied the accused, and immediately there was a stampede among the thirty ones sitting in the back benches to consult a map to find out just where Haliburton is located.

Stevens told the magistrate it was a shame to find a fellow for being drunk.

"Sure I could get drunk on dandelion wine and sherry wine, too," he said.

However, the little speech did not help matters any. The regulations of the O.T.A. must be observed, so the court imposed a fine of $10 and costs.

(William Keyes almost staggered when the magistrate said that he must pay a fine of $10 and costs for taking a round out of the Ontario Temperance Act, or in default go to jail for three months.)

Keyes made the fatal mistake of carrying around a bottle. William is a stranger in our midst, and he will write home for the money.

The magistrate thought it very strange that a chap named R. J. White should bring home three bottles of whiskey from Montreal early in January and not sample the "strong stuff" until Saturday.

"Just got it for sickness," said the accused.

"Not to bring on sickness?" queried the magistrate.

The penalty was fixed at $10 and costs.

Edward Stokes admitted getting under the influence on some liquor he had shipped in from Montreal three weeks ago, and was called to cover a fine of $10 and costs.

CLUB TO ISSUE BONDS.

Proceeds Will Be Used to Pay Off Indebtedness.

An order has been entered by Justice Edgar C. Emerson on application of the Thousand Island Yacht Club, permitting that corporation to mortgage its property in $25,000 to secure a bond issue of like amount to provide money to pay the indebtedness of the club and furnish working capital. It is planned to use $1,150 to pay the indebtedness resulting from the purchase of Welcome Island and adjacent shoals in Alexandria, about half a mile west of the village of Alexandria Bay. This island was formerly owned by William C. Browning and was sold by him to the St. Lawrence Real Estate Association.

These mortgage bonds are to be made to the Northern New York Trust Company, as trustee, and will be 500 in number of a denomination of $50 each bearing interest at five per cent. They will mature June 1st, 1935.

The board of governors of the club, of which Charles S. Rees, of New York city, is the commodore, voted to mortgage the property and issue the bonds at a meeting held Feb. 1, 1918.
