"POLLYANNA" AT THE GRAND.

A Delightful Play—To be Presented Again This Evening.

The lovable little comedy called "Pollyanna," which is so familiar in book form to readers of Eleanor H. Porter, was presented to Kingston theatre-goers at the Grand Opera House on Thursday evening and attracted a large audience.

The comedy is on the lines of the book to a remarkable degree. The first act was the gossip "Ladies Aiders" making a barrel for the far-off mission fields. Pollyanna breezes in from that mission field as the niece of "Aunt Polly." Then her miracle-working in the village by playing what she calls the "sid game" brings her in contact with all of the villagers, including "The Hermit," John Pendleton. Her bringing of happiness to this despondent man adds a thrill to the play.

The play as produced by Klaw & Erlanger is one of the best seen in the city for a long time. It is really the most natural of plays, bringing to mind "Daddy-Long-Legs" and others. In it the real characteristics of human nature are revealed by Miss Patricia Collings (as Pollyanna), who delights her audience. Master Stephen Davis, as the twelve-year-old Jimmy Bean, is one of the best youthful actors seen here in some time. The production is being repeated this evening.

William Henry, the hired man, was well played by Albert Snider. The role of Dorothy Danning, Jack's wife, was well taken by Mrs. E. M. Clow. As Alice Grandon, a society pet, Mrs. F. D. Knapp was charming.

Melinda Jane Boggs, from Cambridge, Ont., was pleasingly taken by Miss Laura Phillips. J. H. Watson, as Sarah Hiram's better-half kept the audience in an uproar. Miss M. E. Babcock as Polly Flinders, a black diamond, did her part exceptionally well. Miss Muriel Stewart, Albion College, gave two readings.

E. E. Dix was soloist for the evening, accompanied by Mr. Craig of Verona. The proceeds were $100.
