ORGANIZE MAN POWER

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT OFFICE OPENED HERE.

Capt. A. C. Trousdale, a Wounded Veteran of the War is District Organizer—Will Act as Intermediary Between Farmers and City Men.

Since the recognition by the Government and the people of Canada that the present war might be prolonged indefinitely there has been a constant demand for the systematic organization and classification of the man power of the country.

The earliest attempts, it will be recalled, were made in the early part of 1916 when an inventory of the males between the ages of sixteen and sixty years was taken in the now famous national service registration. It was claimed that much valuable information was gleaned from the service cards that poured into the government offices, and since that time the demand for mobilization of the human resources has become more and more insistent. This demand will probably culminate in the national registration of all men and women in the Dominion which is now being arranged to be held in the month of June.

The reasons for this desire to find out whether the full weight of the Canadian people is being put to the wheel that is slowly but steadily rolling to victory have become obvious with the progress of the struggle in Europe. No longer will the laissez-faire attitude of ante-bellum days suffice to carry the Empire and the Allies to the gates of triumph, and the need for whole hearted co-operation has been reiterated by the statesmen of the Old and the New World.

The task of winning the war is the prime motive that should underlie every endeavor, and this must be accomplished without present thought of the sacrifices involved. The

CHILDREN HAD WHOOPING COUGH

Whooping cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period, but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

Whooping cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop" Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucus and phlegm.

Mrs. George Cooper, Bloomfield, Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure I can write and tell you that there never was a better cough medicine made than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Our children had whooping cough last winter, and that is the only thing that seemed to help them. It loosens up the phlegm so that they could raise it easily. I will never be without it."

"Dr. Wood's" is 25c and 50c a bottle; put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

army in France is calling for men and food. These are the two prime requisites for victory, and to provide them has been the main purpose of the Canadian government.

The Military Service Act of 1917 was the answer of the government to the cry, "More men." It has secured some twenty thousand reinforcements already and the recent amendments should provide many thousands more.

To the urgency of the clarion call "More food," the government is fully awake, and on Monday morning the first definite steps towards securing an adequate farm force for the farms were made in Kingston.

Capt. A. C. Trousdale, who went overseas with the 109th Battalion and who was wounded while in the service in France, has been appointed district employment agent of the Ontario Government. He took up his duties at the office of the district agricultural representative on Market street on Monday morning, and it is his intention to act as intermediary between employer and employee.

In time the government employment for all classes of laborers, but for the present, emphasis is being laid on the necessity of securing farm labor for the next few months.

Capt. Trousdale is receiving the names of the farmers of the five counties of Frontenac, Leeds, Lennox and Addington, Hastings and Prince Edward who are in need of farm help for the summer months. He is also appealing to boys in the high schools and city men who can spend part or the whole of their vacation on the farm to send in their applications and work will be secured for them.

"When the latest draft of men is taken," said Capt. Trousdale to the Whig, "I think that the farmer will end up with labor from the city, and we'll all have to pull together to feed the men at the front."

No more essential service can be performed by those who are barred from entering the army that to be workers in the second line of defence. With the whole world facing an unprecedented shortage of foodstuffs due to the withdrawal of many millions of men from productive undertakings, with the prices of commodities showing a steady monthly rise and with the constant appeal from those who are catering to the needs of those who face death and danger wherever duty calls them the seriousness of the situation is apparent.

Capt. Trousdale has application blanks in his office in Market street and the organization of resources in his district should be accomplished with facility if the co-operation of every person is assured.

BLACK PUDDINGS ARE IN DEMAND

National Factory Making Them in Britain—Saving in Foodstuffs.

Ottawa, April 23.—A review of the food and trade situation in Britain received by the Governor-General and issued through the Chief Consul's office says:

"The Food Minister reports that notwithstanding the substantial forced reduction in the amount of meat consumed, there has been a notable absence of complaint from any quarter. Heavy workers are now receiving supplementary rations of bacon rendered available by considerable imports from America. Bacon not being for immediate consumption is being stored against the requirements of the summer period. Substantial economies are being effected in the consumption of bread, which is on a lower level than same period last year.

The Food Survey Board have organized a national factory for the utilization of meat residuals hitherto wasted. This factory is now producing daily about a ton of black puddings, which are exempted from rationing restrictions and are in large demand. The national kitchens are making rapid progress, three fresh ones being opened last week.

The Board of Trade reports that the textile Exports Shipping Committee has set up to ration the available shipping space among the export houses, difficulty having been experienced in providing sufficient tonnage for the export of textiles to distant countries.

Rodan Law expresses appreciation of the Canadian Government's part in financing the war. Advances by Britain to the dominions has been very small.

Dublin unions will stop all work as a protest against conscription.

Pale and Feeble But Now Well Again

Mlle. Richer Expresses Gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills

Tells How With the Impurities Cleared From Her Blood She Found a New Lease of Health.
St. George de Windsor, Que., Apr. 23.—(Special)—Grateful for the splendid results she has obtained from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, Mlle. Marie-Anne Richer, well-known resident of this place, is telling the good news to her friends.

"I am happy to recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all the world," Mlle. Richer states. "I was pale and feeble and my blood was filled with impurities, but after taking some boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel that I am cured."

"I am grateful for the marvellous effects obtained from Dodd's Kidney Pills."

If the kidneys are not doing their work of straining the impurities out of the blood the circulation becomes clogged, and sickness is bound to develop. The natural way to cure such sickness is to cure the kidneys. The cured kidneys cleanse the blood of the impurities, the seeds of disease, and the result is good circulation and good health all over the body.

Thousands of other women in Canada join with Mlle. Richer in telling the splendid results obtained from Dodd's Kidney Pills as a kidney remedy.

AN HISTORICAL CRISIS.

"Rebels" of Yesterday Are Now Called "Patriots."

Before the Canadas had learned the rudiments of political science and settled down to play the authorized party game of "Ins and Outs," according to established Parliamentary rules, the young nation had been shaken to its foundations by two rebellions, says the literary editor of The Toronto Mail and Empire. The armed revolt had been precipitated by the high-handedness of an oligarchy, which acted as though divinely appointed to the ruling class. There was not a third rebellion to chronicle in Nova Scotia, was due alone to the deep-rooted imperialism of Howe, for of all the colonies in British North America New Brunswick alone was the oasis of peace in the howling wilderness of politics.

William Lyon Mackenzie and Louis Joseph Papineau led the forces of the rabid reformers, and to their agency may be traced the two rebellions of '37. In "The Patriots of '37" Alfred D. Deceles has written a volume devoted to the events which occurred in Lower Canada during those unhappy times. He shows Papineau as the outstanding figure. Unlike the cross-grained Scotchman in Upper Canada, he took no part in the actual rebellion itself, but the author makes clear that his agitations and seditions speeches precipitated the rebellion. The author does not depict a courageous personality, a leader of forlorn hopes, but rather he shows a vacillating character, who in the moment of supreme test lacked the heroism of the martyr.

The author writes: "Papineau always balked a little at the idea of armed rebellion, and that he was carried off his feet at the end of 1837 by his younger associates, whose enthusiasm he himself had inspired."

This may account for Papineau's over-cautiousness and for the fact that he sought sanctuary across the frontier when the rebellion broke out. Subsequently his assistance was solicited by Nelson, the self-styled president of Canada. The author writes: "Papineau seems to have had some dealings with Nelson and Cole, and to have dallied with the idea of throwing in his lot with them; but he soon broke off negotiations. 'Papineau,' wrote Robert Nelson, 'has abandoned us, and this through selfish and family motives regarding the seigniories and the love of old, bad French laws.' There is every reason to believe, however, that Papineau had been in communication with the authorities at Washington, and that his desertion of Nelson and Cole was in reality due to his discovery that President Van Buren was not ready to depart from his attitude of neutrality."

The various fights and skirmishes which characterized the rebellion are described at length in the work, and the conduct of the Loyalist volunteers is described in it. It helps to explain the author's view: "It is probable that the British officers and perhaps Sir John Colborne himself winked at some of the things which they could not officially recognize. At any rate, it is impossible to acquit Colborne of all responsibility for the conduct of the men under his command."

In summing up the events of the rebellion, the author says: "It is usual to regard the rebellion of 1837 in Lower Canada as no less a fiasco than its counterpart in Upper Canada. There is no doubt that it was hopeless from the outset. It was rather an impromptu movement based upon a sudden resolution than on a well-considered plan of action. Yet it is easy to see that the rebellion might have been much more successful, if it had been supported by the majority of the French-Canadian people, in obedience to the voice of their church, set their faces against it."

Concluding a brief glimpse of the last days of Papineau is given. Like Mackenzie, the Quebec agitator, he had himself of the amnesty, granted some years later, and once more entered politics. He was, however, hopelessly behind the times and retired shortly after to his seigniorie at Montebello. He seldom left the privacy of his estates, but, once, he went down to Montreal, he journeyed to Montreal and made his famous pronouncement: "You will believe me, I trust, when I say to you, I love my country. Opinions outside may differ; but, looking into my heart and my mind in sincerity, I feel that I can say that I love her as she should be loved." The real importance of Papineau after his return to Canada, the author finds, lay not in the Parliamentary sphere, but in the encouragement he gave to anti-clericalism, that found expression in the formation of the Parti Rouge, in many respects a continuation of the Patriots. It is interesting to note that this organization numbered at one time many men who subsequently achieved a nation-wide notoriety, including Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Not Musical.

A western settler went to the nearest township and purchased a music stool, taking it home with him in his trap. In a few days, however, he brought it back and demanded the money paid, as the stool was no good at all. The shopkeeper examined it and said it was in perfect order and that it should not be thrown on his hands.

"Well," said the settler, "I took it home carefully and gave it a turn, and every one of the children gave it a turn, and never a tune could one and all of us screw out of it. It is no more a music stool than the four-legged washing stool the missus puts her tub on."

Expressed in terms of wheat, the value of the field crops destroyed annually in Canada by insect pests is sufficient to feed our entire population for a year.
