CANDY CATHARTIC

WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Tonight sure! Take Cascarets and enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced. Wake up with your head clear, stomach sweet, breath right and feeling fine. Get rid of sick headache, biliousness, constipation, flatulent tongue, sour stomach, bad colds. Clear your skin, brighten your eyes, quicken your step and feel like doing a full day's work. Cascarets are better than salts, pills or calomel because they don't shock the liver or gripe the bowels or cause inconvenience all the next day.

Mothers should give cross, sick, bilious feverish children a whole Cascaret anytime as they can not injure the thirty feet of tender bowels.

Voting in England.
In the interesting debate in the British House of Commons respecting the amendment inserted by the House of Lords in the new Election Bill which would have the effect of including in the franchise Dominion soldiers serving in England, Mr. Herbert Samuel, late Postmaster-General, pointed out that any Canadian which had been here six months would, as the bill stood, be enfranchised, and would even have the effect of electing to them if in France. "If our soldiers were quartered in Canada for six months would the Canadian Government give them Dominion votes?" he asked.

A MOTHER'S CARE

The woman at home, deep in household duties and the cares of motherhood, needs occasional help to keep her in good health. The demands upon a mother's health are many and severe. Her own health trials and her children's welfare exact heavy tolls, while hurried meals, broken rest and much indoor living tend to weaken her constitution. No wonder that the woman at home is often indisposed through weakness, headache, dizziness, backaches and nervousness. Too many women have grown to accept these visitations as a part of the lot of motherhood. But many and varied as her health troubles are, the cause is simple and the cure at hand. When well, it is the woman's good blood that keeps her well; when ill she must make her blood rich to renew her health. The nursing mother, more than any other woman in the world needs rich blood and plenty of it. There is one always unfailing way to get this good blood so necessary for perfect health, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new blood abundantly, and through their use thousands of weak, ailing wives and mothers have been made bright, cheerful and strong. If you are ailing, easily tired or depressed, your family to owe yourself and your young ones to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. What this medicine has done for others it will surely do for you.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is a medicine that has done for others it will surely do for you.

Mr. H. A. L. Fisher, Minister of Education, thought that as the new Government would have the effect of including in the franchise Dominion soldiers serving in England, Mr. Herbert Samuel, late Postmaster-General, pointed out that any Canadian which had been here six months would, as the bill stood, be enfranchised, and would even have the effect of electing to them if in France. "If our soldiers were quartered in Canada for six months would the Canadian Government give them Dominion votes?" he asked.

Birds Disappearing.
Up to the present there is no evidence of a single quail living, surviving the fierce snow blizzards that have blown over southern Ontario. Hungarian partridge are one of the few species that nature has prepared to battle severe elementary attacks, and in one of those favorable localities adjoining Point Pelee, Essex County, known as the reclaimed lands, Hungarian partridge were introduced a short time ago, and have proved their adaptability to their environment, but through lack, evidently, of attention in official duty, the song as well as the same birds and other valuable wild life have fallen before the cruel guns of the pot-hunters and merciless foreigners, who fearlessly combed out the last living being that was cherished by the sportsmen and a future asset to the farmers of that community.

Ian Hay Has Described

Uses of the Telephone

On Battle Lines in France

In his new book, "All In It," which is a continuation of "The First Hundred Thousand," Ian Hay describes the work of the telephone in the battle lines.

Practically all the business of an army in the field is transacted by telephone, says the author. If the telephone breaks down, whether by the act of God or of the King's enemies, that business is at a standstill until the telephone is put right again.

The importance of the disaster varies with the nature of the business. For instance, if the wire leading to the front line of a Division is blown down by a March gale, and your weekly return of Men Recommended for False Teeth is delayed in transit, nobody minds very much—except possibly the Deputy Director of Auxiliary Dental Appliances. But if you are engaged in battle, and the wires which use the driving force in front with the directing force behind are devastated by a storm of shrapnel, the matter assumes a more—nay, a most—serious aspect. Hence the superlative importance in modern warfare of the great sections of the Royal Engineers—terse described by the rank and file as the "Buzzers" or the "Idly-Umples."

During peace-training the buzzer, on the whole, has a very pleasant time of it. Once he has mastered the mysteries of the semaphore, and Morse codes the most laborious part of his education is over. Henceforth he spends his days upon some sheltered hillside, in company with one or two congenial spirits, flapping cryptic messages out of a blue and white flag at a similar party across the valley.

But once in the thick of things there is no flag-wagging. The buzzer's first proceeding upon entering the field of active hostilities is to get underground, and stay there.

He is a seasoned veteran, the buzzer of to-day, and a person of marked individuality. He is, above all things, a man of the world. Slitting day and night in a dugout, or a cellar, with a telephone receiver clamped to his ears, he sees little; but he hears much, and overhears more. He also speaks a language of his own. His one task in life is to prevent the letter B sounding like C, or D, or P, or T, or V over the telephone; so he has perverted the English language to his own uses. He calls B "Beer," and D "Don," and so on. He salutes the night watchman as "Ack Emma," and the soldier as "Pip Emma." He refers to the letter S as "Essex," in order to distinguish it from F. He has no respect for the most majestic military titles. To him the Deputy Assistant Director of the Mobile Veterinary Section is "Don Ack Don Emma Vie Essex."

He is also a man of detached mind. The tactical situation does not interest him. His business is to disseminate news, not to write leading articles on the (social side) of the war. You may be engaged in a life and death struggle for the possession of your own parapet, but this does not render you immune from a pink slip from the signal station, asking you to state your reasons in writing for having mislaid four pieces of "bombs," "bang," "bang," lately the property of number seven platoon.

Thirdly, the buzzer is a humorist of the sardonic variety. The constant clash of wit over the wires and the necessity of framing words quickly, sharpens his faculties, and acidulates his tongue. Incidentally, he is an awkward person to quarrel with. One black night Bobby Little, making his second round of the trenches—about an hour before "stand-to," felt constrained to send a telephone message to battalion headquarters. "Taking a good breath—you always do this before entering a trench dug-out—he plunged into the noiseless cavern where his company signaller kept everlasting vigil. The place was in total darkness, except for the illumination supplied by a strip of light hanging in a tin of rifle oil. The air, which there was of it, was thick with large fat, floating particles of free carbon. The telephone was buzzing plaintively to itself in unsuccessful competition with a well-modulated quartet of four nasal organs, contributed by Bobby's entire signalling staff, who, locked in the inextricable embrace peculiar to Thomas Atkins in search of warmth, were snoring harmoniously upon the earthen floor.

"The signaller 'on duty'—one McGurk—expressed the opinion that he had put under arrest for sleeping at his post. The enormity of his crime was heightened by the fact that two undelivered messages were found upon his person.

"Divers pains and penalties followed. Bobby supplemented the sentence with homily on the importance of vigilance and despatch. McGurk, deeply aggrieved at forfeiting seven days' pay, said nothing, but bided his time. Two nights later the battalion came out of trenches for a week's rest, and Bobby, weary and thankful, retired to bed in his hut at 9 p.m. in comfortable anticipation of a full night's repose.

His anticipations were doomed to disappointment. He was roused from slumber—not without difficulty—by Signaller McGurk, who appeared robbing at his bedside with a guttering candle-end in one hand and a pink dispatch form in the other. The message said:

"Prevailing wind for next twenty-four hours probably S. W., with some rain.

Mindful of his own recent admonitions, Bobby thanked McGurk politely and went to sleep again.

McGurk called again at half-past 2 in the morning with another message, which announced:

"Baths will be available for your company from 2 to 3 p.m. to-morrow.

Bobby stuffed the message under his pillow and rolled over without a word. McGurk withdrew, leaving the door of the hut open.

His next visit was about 4 o'clock. This time the message said:

"A zeppelin is reported to have passed over Dunkirk at 5 p.m. yesterday afternoon, proceeding in a northerly direction."

Bobby informed McGurk that he was a fool and a dotard, and cast him forth.

McGurk returned at 5.30 bearing written evidence that the zeppelin had been traced as far as Ostend.

This time his company commander promised him that if he appeared again that night he would be awarded fourteen days' Field Punishment Number One.

The result was that upon sitting down to breakfast at 9 next morning Bobby found upon his plate yet another message—from his commanding officer—summoning him to the orderly room on urgent matters at 8.30.

But Bobby scored the final and winning trick. Sending for McGurk and Sergeant McMicking, he said:

"This man, Sergeant, appears to be unable to decide when a message is urgent and when it is not." In future, whenever McGurk is on night duty and is in doubt as to whether a message should be delivered at once or put aside till morning, he will come to you and ask for your guidance in the matter. Do you understand?"

"Perfectly, sir," replied the sergeant, outwardly calm.

"McGurk, do you understand?"

An International League.

From Morocco to Walfisch Bay the west coast of Africa has been the scene of a scramble between great Powers. Asiatic Turkey with the Bagdad railway is the shining prize at which Germany aims through the "Mittel Europa" scheme. Each power has sought colonies and spheres of influence for the exclusive benefit of its own business interests. What better way can be devised to prevent the recurrence of these "wars of steel and gold," as Mr. Brailsford has termed them, than by substituting for the rival economic ambitions of each people an agreement for the economic advantage of all? Let the great colonizing states follow the example of the American States who ceded their western lands to the Confederation.

France, Great Britain, Germany, Belgium, Italy, Portugal would then vest in an international European Congress and its executive organs the title to practically the whole of Central Africa. The same Congress should assume the responsibility for the bankrupt concerns of Turkey and Persia. Russia, England, France, and Germany would then have the merit of yielding each a selfish advantage, in order to cement a European union and to promote the common welfare.

At once the European League of Nations would become the administrator of a great public domain of world. It would derive therefrom a strength and importance at the moment almost incalculable. It would begin to strike roots, as under similar circumstances in North America, into a sentiment of unity and allegiance in a new brotherhood of States. It would establish complete freedom of trade for all nations throughout the whole extent of the common territory. It would naturally add to the administration of the new domain the responsibility for the neutralized strategic canals, and other waterways in the old world, and for neutralized territories also.

The first administrators of the new territories should be chosen from peoples accustomed to self-government and not directly involved in the present war, Swiss, Dutch, and Scandinavians.—American Review of Reviews.

Dr. Johnson's Wit.

It is well known, says Outlook, that Dr. Johnson's odd humor crept into some of the definitions in his great English dictionary; for instance, he defined lexicographer as "a writer of dictionaries; a harmless drudge." His dictionary was first published in 1755. Another English dictionary, Bailey's, appeared many years before Johnson's, and it was so popular that several editions of it were printed after its rival appeared. Early editions of Bailey give, under lexicographer, "a writer of a lexicon," etc. In a copy of the edition of 1765, however, picked up recently in New York, there is found added to this, "also, a harmless drudge." Bailey's reviser of 1766, who was apparently not altogether harmless as a drudge, thus copied Dr. Johnson's pleasantry as a new definition!

Whoppers.

Two soldiers, an Irishman and an Englishman, having met in Flanders, began to talk of the hairbreadth escapes they had in battle.

"Well, said the Englishman, "one day in the height of an engagement a shell took the hair of my head. Now, what do you think of that for a haircut?"

"Sure," said Pat, "when I was in a battle a bullet from one of them Maxims whizzed by me and took off every hair of my face. What do you think of that for a close shave?"

Easy Drop.

The "lonely" soldier wanted to let down gently the philanthropic dandy who wrote to him three times a week.

"Can you tell me why your eyes are like you and me?" was the query he put in one letter.

"No, dear lonely one, I can't. Tell me, oh, tell me, why they are thus," replied the maiden.

In the following letter came the answer:

"Because they correspond, but will never meet!"

LADY ROSSMORE DIPLOMAT

London, April 21.—Lady Rossmore, wife of the Lord-Lieutenant of the County of Monaghan, was fined $50 for sending a false message to Ireland, reading, "Germans are marching in on Calais."

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER

SO GOOD AS MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS.

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels, and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old-fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 75 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results, for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 3rd, last, after having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

Lemon Juice is Skin Beautifier, Also a Whitener

Many women use just the juice of lemons to bleach or whiten the skin, but pure lemon juice is acid, therefore irritating, and should be mixed with orchard white.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach acne, freckles, and blemishes on the face, and remove such skin blemishes as freckles, sallowness, and blotches. It is the ideal skin softener, smoothen and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and mix up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should naturally help to bring back to any skin the whiteness, the sweet freshness and flexibility of which it has been robbed by carelessness or trying atmospheric conditions.
