A LIFETIME OF SUFFERING

Prevented by "Fruit-a-lives" The Wonderful Fruit Medicine

12 Masons Ave. Srs. Hill, Qex. "In my opinion, no other medicine is so good as 'Fruit-a-lives' for Indigestion and Constipation.

For years, I suffered with these dreaded diseases, trying all kinds of treatments until I was told I was incurable.

One day a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-lives'. To my surprise, I found this medicine gave immediate relief, and in a short time I was all right again."

To Properly Treat Obstinate Wrinkles

Particularly where wrinkles are long and deep, the massage devotee is apt to rub too hard and too frequently. This loosens the skin, causes irritation, and aggravates the wrinkled condition--just the opposite result from that sought.

Better than massage, or anything else, for the most obstinate wrinkles, as well as the finest lines, is a remarkable formula which you may readily avail yourself of, as you will have no difficulty in preparing the constituents from your own kitchen. It is this: One ounce powdered soapstone, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Rub the face, neck and hands in this. The effect is really marvelous, not only as to wrinkles, but also in cases of baggy cheeks and chin. This application is cooling and soothing, tending to relieve fatigue. Both the witch hazel and the soapstone are of course entirely harmless to the skin.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE

CHAPTER LV. I heard cries, groans and curses; but they seemed to come from a great distance. The acrid smell of smoke, then a crackling sound that was not quite like anything I ever had heard.

"Hurry!" I heard some one cry, then more cries and curses; then I must have fainted, as I know no more until I opened my eyes out of doors. George still held me in his arms, but he was pale as death.

"What is it? Put me down," I said, as remembrance of that cry of "fire" came to me. "Are you hurt?" I asked just as George set me on my feet. He swayed weakly but steadied himself.

"No, but you are rather heavy," he looked anxiously at me as his color returned.

"Feel all right?" he asked.

"Yes, a little weak, and my throat is so dry."

"That's the smoke. I covered your face, but some brute dragged the handkerchief off in his rush past us."

"Was anyone hurt?" I asked.

"A few were trampled upon; I don't think any were burned," he replied as he signalled a passing taxi.

A Rough Experience.

"Your coat is all torn, George," I said, noting for the first time that his coat hung in tatters, that his collar and necktie were awry; that he was wholly disheveled.

"It was a pretty rough path I had," he said, looking at himself in absolute unconcern.

I commenced to laugh hysterically as soon as we were in the cab.

"Stop that!" he said severely, then, "what are you laughing at?"

Unusual Tenderness.

This unusual tenderness quite unnerved me. I reached up and put my arms around his neck, but said nothing. He kissed me again, and said:

"Thank God, darling, you were not hurt."

All the time Celeste was preparing me for bed and the doctor, I was absolutely unconscious of what she was doing; of anything she said. All I heard was "darling," spoken in that tender tone that made me feel he meant it. So I was his darling, after all.

The doctor came, examined my throat, asked me numberless questions, gave me some medicine, then after doing the same for George, he departed, saying:

"You were very fortunate. Many were hurt in that scramble to get out, a few very seriously. Why people act like mad beasts in such cases, I can't imagine. If they would keep their heads there would be no one injured. But these panics are terrible things."

George sat with me a little while, then he went to bed. But first he left word that on no account were either of us to be disturbed in the morning. We both slept until nearly noon.

Annie said she had been kept busy all the morning assuring friends who had seen us at the theatre that we were not injured. That the telephone had rung incessantly.

George dressed and went down to the office, but made me promise I would remain in bed. I gave the promise very willingly. I still felt faint and rather shaky.

Evelyn came over and I told her all about it, as much as I had sensed.

"Your husband was wonderful!" she said when I finished.

"Indeed he was!" I agreed, but I did not tell her that to me the most wonderful of all was his calling me "darling" and being so tender of me.

MAY DEFER ASSEMBLY

Presbyterian Officials Are Considering A Postponement.

Toronto, April 24.—High officials of the Presbyterian Church are discussing the question as to whether the General Assembly should meet this year. No action has yet been taken in the matter, but it is certainly being seriously considered, and there is some probability that the Assembly will be deferred for another year.

The chief reason for the postponement is an economic one. In addition there are no vital questions up for settlement.

Enormous Grain Movement.

Winnipeg, April 24.—With a million acres increase in Saskatchewan seeding, half a million in Alberta, and a quarter of a million in Manitoba, and with 50 per cent. of the seeding completed, the G.T.P. has placed a contract for 50,000 grain car doors. The railroad anticipates an enormous movement of grain. With conditions more favorable more ground has been broken than in the famous crop year of 1915.

LESSONS FOR THE Home Embroiderer

A New Shape Gives Novelty to a Buffet Set Consisting of Oblong and Round Doilies.

By KATHRYN MUTTHER.

EMBROIDERIES for Spring and Summer use are quite as interesting as the latest frocks. Their designs show an element of restraint that is admirably in keeping with the general demand for simplicity, while adequately measuring up to the most exacting standards of decoration. Linens for the buffet are always of absorbing interest because, next to the dining table here is no piece of furniture in the nine-room which comes so prominently into use.

The buffet set illustrated here consists of one oblong doily, fourteen by thirty inches, accompanied by seven round doilies, fourteen inches diameter. The ends of the long doily are cut out in curved outline so that the accompanying doilies will fit into them without jarring effect. The design consists of roses placed equal distances on a delineating line of cross stitching. Two shades of pink cotton are used for the roses, a green for the leaves and blue for the single lines. A simple white border finishes the edge of very much time to make, and when finished the articles are not only dainty and attractive, but have as well a highly practical value.

Linen cloth is a good material upon which to do cross-stitch, or it may be done on loose weave linen in which case the design is stamped on the material. The material must, of course, be carefully stretched when the embroidery is framed. One sampler is often suggestive of many others.

It is much easier to use rather coarse woven materials for cross-stitch work instead of the canvas laid over the material. Of course there are designs which cannot be done in any other way, but the pulling of threads is difficult in the cross-stitch in any case.
