

The Theatres

At The Grand.

"I Love You" will be shown at the Grand for the last time to-night and all those who miss this seven-reel Triangle super-production will miss the treat of the season. Beautiful Alma Rubens is featured in this picture and she is supported by an all-star cast, among which are Wheeler Oakman and Francis McDonald. The action of the play is centred around the sale of a picture of the daughter of a rural florist (played by Miss Rubens) to a wealthy Frenchman by a young artist. The Frenchman has fallen in love with the beautiful face in the frame and after buying the picture he goes and seeks out the original. After time he succeeds in winning the little peasant girl and she now has her first taste of true happiness. How this step almost wrecked the lives of them both and what happened after will be unfolded during the picture. Besides this there will be the Pathé News, two reels of the best comedy and an act of polite vaudeville that will round out an excellent bill.

At Griffin's.

Last evening an exceedingly large audience gathered at this popular theatre, to view one of the most stupendous and wonderful programmes ever shown at one performance. Headed by the Paramount pictures superb masterpiece, "La Tosca," flamed in song and story as the world's greatest and most tragic heroine, and brought to the screen by an emotional artist without a peer, Miss Pauline Frederick. Costumes, settings, even the story, follow closely the operatic production as enacted by Cavalieri Farrar, Hempstad and others of the great divas. "La Tosca" is said to be one of the most exquisite screen productions ever filmed. As an added attraction the world famous screen vampire, Theda Bara, is shown in a picture of tense drama. Familiar Quotations

When people grow up to look at life in a certain way, from a certain viewpoint, it is difficult, almost impossible, to change them. It's—it's their religion. They are convinced that if the world doesn't go on in their way, according to their principles, everything will be destroyed. They aren't inhuman. Within limits everybody is more than willing to help the world along, if only they can be convinced that what they are asked to do will help.
