The Theatres

At the Grand. For Thursday and Friday only the Grand will offer the latest five-act World picture, "The Strong Way," with June Elvidge in the leading role. One of the notable features in connection with this production is the remarkable beauty of the outdoor scenes. The story is laid in New York city, where various interesting phases of the metropolis are shown. Miss Elvidge assumes the part of Eunice Torrence, a young girl who marries an older man, who turns out to be a hard-hearted wretch. He heaps indignities upon his wife, and when Don Chadwick, her girlhood lover, tries to help her out of her trouble, it is with remarkable consequences. "The Strong Way" has a notably strong cast. All of the characters are splendidly portrayed by skilled screen artists, and the whole picture has been staged on a high plane of perfection. The Pathe News and some good comedy reels that are sure to make you laugh, along with an act of the best vaudeville, which consists of Les Valadons in a novelty wire act that comes highly recommended, will round out this first-class programme.

Coming—"The Brat."

Oliver Morosco's delightful and refreshing comedy success, "The Brat," written by Mande Filton, is to make a welcome return visit here on Saturday, May 4th, matinee and night, at the Grand Opera House, and the brilliant New York cast which supported Miss Rea Martin in the leading role when last here will again present this wholesome laugh-maker. "The Brat" has concluded a coast to coast tour, in which every city of note in the Dominion have visited, and great crowds have flocked to see this bright little star in her now famous role of "The Brat." She has proved beyond peradventure that she has exceptional talent, and the play itself has been hailed as one of the most delightful and entertaining comedies on the American stage to-day. "The Brat" does not have to use double meaning phrases to get a laugh, clean, wholesome humor doing all that is necessary in that line.

At Griffin's.

Again last evening a large audience witnessed with enthusiasm our exceedingly fine programme, which is headed by the gripping play, "The Barrier," from the famous novel of the same name by Rex Beach. The interest of the story becomes more graphic and human in the screen. The picture is strong, vital and human. The acting alone is worth the price of an orchestra chair.

Another picturesque photoplay, and one which highly pleased the large audience was petite Ann Pennington in her latest success, "Sunshine Nan," which was voted one of the most charming of this popular favorite's recent productions. These two features comprise our bill for this evening as well as episode eight of "Vengeance and the Woman."

and should attract a capacity audience for the final showing.

A Daughter of Uncle Sam. In this new thrilling serial for patriotic audiences, there is also a splendid red-blooded strain of romance to be found throughout the whole twelve chapters. This most remarkable serial "A Daughter of Uncle Sam," abounds in exciting thrilling action and encounters which have resulted from conflicts between American patriots and German secret agents, who have been striving to interfere with "Uncle Sam's" great war machine. First episode at the King Edward Friday and Saturday. Tonight "The Mystery Ship." Usual admission.

LEAVING ORPHANS' HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter Severed Their Connection.

On Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter, who have been superintending the Orphans' Home for the past five years, severed their connection with the institution. During their tenure of office they have endeared themselves to the staff and the children. They have left the home in a flourishing condition and will be much missed. The best wishes of all go with them. On their departure they were presented with an address felicitating them on their excellent work in the institution.

Brightest and dearest of little girls. We miss today your sunny curls. The sound of little feet patterning over the floor. And the wee hand that waved goodbye at the door.

God knew best where the little feet would roam.

So He took his precious jewel home: The little girl, you see, happy be. With One who said, "Suffer little children to come unto Me."

Dear little Evelyn, we will not fret and cry.

For we know you are happy up in the sky.

Safe in that beautiful home above. Where there is peace and joy and love.

MORE MEN NEEDED.

An Analysis of the First Call Under Conscription.

Whether the second or some additional class under the Military Service Act will be called out is a question of policy which the Government will shortly have to determine. The call will not likely be immediate, but an analysis of the figures as to the operation so far of the selective draft enactment leads to the conclusion that either the process will have to be greatly expedited as regards the first-class, or measures will be necessary to secure men from those classes which so far have been relieved from the call. Some at least of the members of the Military Service Council favor the latter procedure.

Since the act became operative, thirty thousand draftees have been secured, or will be, during the present month. Then there are upwards of 16,000 volunteers enlisted from Canada or the United States since Sept. 1st, bringing the total reinforcements up to 47,000. If all these men had been brought to the colors as the direct result of the act, and if the proportions were equally distributed throughout Canada, the result would be regarded as satisfactory. As matters now stand, there is urgent need for more men, in view of the impending and tremendously vital conflict on the western front.

The only available machinery in securing them is that which is provided by the Military Service Act, and its operation is clogged up with so many appeals, the disposal of which involves so much delay that it is clear the congestion before the tribunals must either be removed promptly or else recourse be had to some other class. Fifty thousand appeals are pending, 34,000 of them in Quebec, the greater portion having been entered by the military authorities from the exemptions of the local tribunals. Very probably, in a few days extra judges will be appointed to assist the thirty-four now assigned to these cases. Likewise, the central appeal judge will be given assistance.

Outside of the district of Hull, which for military purposes is in Ottawa, and where the enlistments through the war have been very creditable, the whole province of Quebec, under the Military Service Act, has produced so far only 1,718 men, as against 5,238 in Toronto district, 1,236 in Kingston and Ottawa, and 2,225 in Winnipeg.

The right of appeal is fully guaranteed by the act, but while there are 34,000 appeals in Quebec, only 1,597 are pending elsewhere. The latter are more essentially appeals entered by individuals refused exemption.

In the improbable event of the total number of military appeals being upheld, the first class would secure about 100,000 men, the limit under the act; if only half the appeals are sustained, the limit would be 70,000.

However, a total of 3,321 men who failed to report are being rounded up. There are others placed in the lower medical category who, after examination, may land in category A. A third and promising class comprises men exempted up to a certain date, or who have failed to comply with the imposed conditions as to occupation.

Some persons aver that the provinces which have done well both under the voluntary system and under the M.S.A. may not view with equanimity a call for a second class until a greater share has been contributed by Quebec. The needs of increased production at home also enter the situation.
