NO MORE KIDNEY TROUBLE

Since He Commenced to Take "Fruit-a-tives"

73 LEXA AVENUE, OTTAWA, ONT.
"Three years ago, I began to feel run-down and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of 'Fruit-a-tives', I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using 'Fruit-a-tives', and I know now what I have not known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain."

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

AN UNEXPECTED DISAGREEMENT

CHAPTER LXI.
The tone in which George interrupted my recital of the day's doings surprised and puzzled me. It was cold, almost as if he were terribly angry about something, yet I could think of nothing I had done to displease him.
"Yes, he asked us to come and see his pictures, then his man served us a delicious luncheon. We had creamed chicken and lots of things. Then he showed us all through his studio apartment, then we had to run because we had told the dressmaker we would be back at a certain time."
I had talked so fast he had no chance to interrupt if he wished to, but now he said:
"Have I ever given you permission to lunch at studios?"
"Why not, but—" suddenly I knew he was angry because I had gone to Merton Gray's studio. I was a bit frightened, as always, because I had displeased him; but there was also a little thrill of gladness because he cared. Could he care enough to be the tiniest bit jealous?
"Well, I do not like it! It isn't pleasant to meet people who tell you things about your wife."
I knew, then. He had met Julia Collins. Unfortunately I said so.
A Foolish Remark.
"Oh, I know! That catty Mrs. Collins told you. We met her and she acted as if she wanted to join us, and we just nodded and hurried on."
Evelyn doesn't like her; neither do I. I suppose she was cross because Mr. Gray hadn't asked her. I bit my lip. I had almost said "Merton." Mrs. Sexton had been right; I must not think of him, or any other, by their first name.
"Mrs. Collins is an old friend of mine. I prefer you should speak more respectfully of her. You say Evelyn Reese was with you?"
"Why yes, she has spent the entire day with me. She was so delighted to see Mr. Gray's pictures. He showed us some he has finished, as well as those he is working on."
"So long as you did not go alone I have no objections, save that it isn't a thing I would want you to do often. An occasional visit to a prominent artist's studio can do no harm, if you have some one with you. But hereafter ask my permission before you go."
He did not seem to expect an answer, so I made none. Yet had I should have refused. Give such a promise. It was unbearable. He treated me as if I were six years old instead of twenty and a married woman. I certainly shouldn't ask his permission when I wanted to go somewhere, just because that horrid Julia Collins had been mad because she was not asked to go along.
George was quite pleasant all through dinner. But I was not, although of course I dared not give expression to my feelings. I wanted to talk of the good time we had had. I wanted to tell him of the things Merton had said; of the society woman's portrait, and everything. But if I started the subject again, he might repeat his command, so I sat trying to appear pleasant, but in reality sullen and cross.
A Time of Peace.
The two days that passed before I was to leave for home, were unusually pleasant days for me. George was continually kind. As usual, I thought many times a day of this, and also, as usual, wondered why—when he could be so nice—he at times was so disagreeable, so almost unkind.
Evelyn kept her promise and was over as soon as she finished her marketing in the morning, and remained until late in the afternoon. She helped me buy some gifts for the home folks—a dress for mother, a nice smoking outfit with a lot of his favorite tobacco for dad, and books and fishing outfits for the boys. How I did enjoy spending money for them! That was one nice thing about having a rich husband. One could buy things for those one loved.
I was to remain away not quite two weeks. George had been very emphatic as to the time. I had begged for an extension, and he had said:
"You will either return when I say, or you will not go."
That frightened me, and I promised faithfully to return on the very train he had ordered me to. Now that I really knew I was to see father and mother and the boys I should have been broken-hearted had anything happened to interfere with my plans.
So I tried not to fret because of the short visit I was to make and to think only of the pleasure in store. Pleasure for them, and for me. I knew they would be delighted to see me. Mother's letters had been filled with longing for months. She was not very well, or she would have come to Moreland to visit me long ago. But father couldn't come with her, and none of them wanted her to make the journey alone.
The morning I left George went to the station with me. We stopped on the way and he bought me a wonderful basket of fruit, some candy, and late magazines. The fruit I determined to keep for mother. It was such an attractive basket.

because we've made the Comfort Soap bar bigger for the same money. Of course the new bar's wrapper is not good for premiums—during the war at least—but that makes war-time economy possible in the shape of the bigger bar.

COMFORT SOAP

is admitted to have "enormously the largest sale in Canada." Why? Sheer merit. Nothing else. It washes beautifully—it lasts a long time—and so of course its friends last. If YOU haven't used Comfort, try the new, bigger bar today, you'll be glad you did.

The Official Laboratory Model in an Exquisite Walnut Cabinet

Study the graceful lines; the satisfying proportions of this beautiful William and Mary cabinet.

It was selected by a process of elimination from the field of forty candidates. Forty sketches were submitted by leading designers. Fifteen cabinets were actually constructed; one from each of the fifteen sketches which were selected as deserving consideration. And finally the model you see was voted the most beautiful—worthy of encasing

The New Edison
"The Phonograph with a Soul."

No picture can do justice to this exquisite cabinet. You must actually see it—see the warm rich tints, the velvety texture of the walnut surfaces.

See it in our window. Or, better still, come into our store and hear the instrument itself.

IN THE LAND OF COMMON SENSE

Says it is suicide to cut corns, and tells how they lift right out

You simply say to the drug store man, "Give me a quarter of an ounce of freestone." This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet.
A few drops applied directly upon a tender, aching corn should relieve the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn, root and all, can be lifted out with the fingers, without pain.
This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that while freestone is sticky it dries in a moment, and seems to simply shrivel up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.
Don't let father die from infection or lockjaw from whittling at his corns, but cut this out and make him try it.

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Came to this Woman after Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Restore Her Health

Ellensburg, Wash.—"After I was married I was not well for a long time and a good deal of the time was not able to go about. Our greatest desire was to have a child in our home and one day my husband came back from town with a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and wanted me to try it. It brought relief from my troubles. I improved in health so I could do my housework; we now have a little one, all of which I owe to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. O. S. JOHNSON, R. No. 3, Ellensburg, Wash.

There are women everywhere who long for children in their homes yet are denied this happiness on account of some functional disorder which in most cases would readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such women should not give up hope until they have given this wonderful medicine a trial, and for special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of 40 years' experience is at your service.

Queen Mary received Matron Margaret Macdonald, the chief of the Canadian Nursing Forces, give such a promise. It was unbearable. He treated me as if I were six years old instead of twenty and a married woman. I certainly shouldn't ask his permission when I wanted to go somewhere, just because that horrid Julia Collins had been mad because she was not asked to go along.
