CITIZENS PAY TRIBUTE

TO THE WORTH OF THE LATE ROBERT MEEK.

All Classes of the People Greatly Moved by His Death—The Funeral Arrangements for Friday Afternoon.

Mayor Hughes was deeply affected by the news of the death of Robert MEEK.

"His death will be a great loss to the city," said the Mayor. "He was a hard worker for the interests of Kingston, always doing all he could to help the city he loved so well, and his death will be keenly felt."

Whig reporters heard many tributes paid to the deceased while on their rounds. Owing to the fact that Mr. MEEK was identified with so many organizations, he was widely known, and in this way came in contact with many people.

William Cook, president of the Board of Trade, also paid a warm tribute to the deceased, as did also R. J. Rodger, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, and J. M. Farrell, chairman of the Board of Education.

Reeve James Halliday, of Portsmouth, said that Mr. MEEK worked just as hard for the interests of the county as the city, and that he was always willing and ready to put his shoulder to the wheel to help out on anything that would be of benefit to the people. Reeve Halliday made feeling reference to Mr. MEEK's last public utterance, when he addressed the County Council on behalf of the campaign of the Military Y. M. C. A.

Ald. D. J. Millan also had warm words of praise for Mr. MEEK, who, he stated, had worked hard for the interests of the city.

Bishop Bidwell: "I have known the late Robert MEEK for the nine years I have lived in Kingston, and have on several occasions come into contact with him in philanthropic and religious work in the city. His zeal and devotion to the public service deeply impressed me, as did his practical religion. He will be a great loss to the community in many ways, and I join with my fellow-citizens in regretting his sudden removal from our midst, and at the same time offer my sincere sympathy to his bereaved family."

Judge H. A. Lavell: "I have known Mr. MEEK all my life, and have been especially impressed by his unselfish devotion to what he considered his duty. He was, I think, one of the most public-spirited men I have ever known, and I do not know presently in the city of Kingston of any man who can take his place in that respect. His whole life was an inspiration to those who came in contact with him."

R. F. Elliott: "Mr. MEEK was an extraordinarily good citizen, and he was sadly missed. He was active in every department of public life, and leaves a vacancy that it is difficult to fill. He was a good, loyal Kingstonian, and a Christian gentleman. I deeply deplore his death."

M. Sullivan: "The death of Robert MEEK is a shock, and the city has suffered a great loss. Mr. MEEK possessed great ability, and he was untiring in his efforts to promote the public good in all of the many activities in which he engaged. He was a loyal citizen, fearless, honest and kind."

J. M. Farrell: "I cannot think of any citizen whose loss would be more generally felt than that of Mr. MEEK. He had a high sense of public duty, and gave of his very best without stint in promoting any cause, religious, charitable, social or commercial, for the betterment of the city. He never asked others to do what he would not do himself, and by his enthusiasm and untiring effort inspired those co-operating with him in any cause to greater effort. He was thorough in his work. I feel his loss a personal one."

O. V. Bartels, City Treasurer: "A faithful and esteemed friend," never too busy for a cheery greeting and always ready to give his advice and assistance in the improvement of municipal and public affairs."

R. J. McClelland, City Engineer: "Let me live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man. This was his life."

W. A. Newlands, Collector of Taxes: "A man with clear insight into civic affairs, whose advice and counsel was invaluable and whose relations with the officials was always extremely pleasant."

Prof. A. P. Knight said: "Robert MEEK was a big man, public-spirited, who gave of his time without stint to everything that promoted the welfare of the citizens, morally, socially and educationally."

Robert Crawford: "Robert MEEK was a man above the average in mental attainments, with an extraordinary special aptitude for organization. He held the highest ideals of Christian citizenship, a man whom the community can ill afford to spare. He was esteemed by all. His life was an exemplary one, and he was beloved by those who knew him best. To me, who knew him intimately, the personal loss is irreparable."

Rev. Dr. Macgillivray: "I knew Mr. MEEK for thirty years. He was a first rate citizen, interested in all good work, a man of sound judgment and possessing a willing spirit. He was well-liked by all who knew him."

H. C. Nichol: "Mr. MEEK was a man who was held in the highest respect. I was associated with him in the Victory Loan campaign. He took hold of his work with the greatest enthusiasm and was one of the best organizers I ever knew."

R. J. Carson: "In the death of Robert MEEK Kingston has lost one of its best public-spirited citizens, a man who always had the interest and advancement of Kingston at heart, and did everything to promote her welfare. I regret exceedingly the loss of a beloved Christian citizen, a truly honorable man."

In concluding a brilliant editorial on the death of the late Whig proprietor, E. J. B. Pense, just eight years ago, Mr. MEEK used the following lines of an anonymous poet, which are also most fittingly applicable to himself, now that he has gone to his rest:

To-night I'm tired, Master; for rest I turn to Thee.
Turn to Thee for quiet; let me Thy presence see.
Thy words are full of beauty, the tasks Thy hand hath set,
Have every one their meaning; I love them all, and yet

I turn from these to seek Thee. Do Thou Thy spirit give;
Thy love and peace will rest me; in Thee my soul doth live.

Funeral Arrangements.

The funeral arrangements are completed for Friday afternoon. Rev. J. D. Ellis, B.A., pastor of Queen Street Methodist Church, will be in charge of the services at the house. It is expected that the Oddfellows and other organizations will attend in a body.

The bearers will be Mayor Hughes, representing the corporation; William Cook, president of the Board of Trade; J. M. Farrell, chairman of the Board of Education; Judge Lavell, president of the Canadian Club; James A. Minnes, president of the Oddfellows' Relief Association, and Capt. R. Crawford, representing Queen Street Methodist Church.

The floral tributes are exceptionally beautiful and come from many organizations and sympathizing friends and relatives, not only from this city but from all parts of Canada and the United States. Scores of telegrams have been received, all bearing testimony to the worth of the deceased.
