"Taken Captive by Bull Moose."

COMING down the Canadian Pacific and Algoma Central last winter on a return trip from Winnipeg to Sault Ste. Marie big Jack Breckenridge—the husky timber ranger for the paper company, pointed out to me an island in the centre of Monongee Lake. He stated the final setting to a most thrilling encounter a "tenderfoot" had with a bull moose. Here it is as told to me by a man with bull moose lungs—you can separate the gold from the dross at your leisure.

A Censorship That Failed

TO us who lived in Constantinople Abdul Hamid was a mystery, a fear and a constant sinister influence. We never spoke his name in the street; we never pointed at his palace; we never noticed his outrages. It was best to keep a close mouth and eyes straight ahead in the years I was in his city, says Prof. Jenkins, formerly of the University of Constantinople, speaking of the death of Abdul-Hamid.

Constantinople was a place of fear when I lived there, from 1900 to 1909. We were afraid of Abdul Hamid and his spies, he was in constant dread of losing his power and his life. He realized that progress for Turkey meant his downfall, and he was in perpetual fear of the germ of liberalism entering from Europe. He kept out of Turkey all books that mentioned Turkey or Islam. He censored all mail, and all parties and meetings of people. No clubs or meetings were allowed. The newspapers were a nullity, all real news being forbidden, and discussions on the weather and reports of people whom his majesty had proscribed. Business was stifled. Telephones were forbidden because they transmitted messages so rapidly that treason might be hatched over them. Typewriters were prohibited because they might write treasonable words. All the money in the country flowed into the bottomless pockets of the palace clique and the Sultan. By the time Abdul Hamid had starved that a revolution was brewing, a Turk was in danger if he were seen talking to a European and the coffee houses frequented by foreigners were forbidden to Muslims. If a Turkish acquaintance walked along the bridge with us we felt nervous and suspicious. If a Turk were once suspected, all his friends and acquaintances would shun him as if he were a leper. There is nothing that we have learned of espionage in these years of the war that was not outside in Turkey in 1907.

Returning to Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. E. Reid's family will take up their residence in Kingston, coming from Smith's Falls. Mr. Reid had been shipper at the General Robertson wholesale grocery for the past five years. He goes to take a similar position in the head warehouse in Kingston. Mrs. Reid has taken an active interest in the musical affairs of the town and was one of the soloists and a valued member of Westminster church choir. On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Reid were entertained by the Ladies' Aid at a tea in the school room of the church, when the choir and their friends were invited.

Coal Still Scarce. The scarcity of shipping is having its effect on the coal trade, as well as the lessened supply of coal at the lake ports on the American side, is having an effect on the supply coming into Kingston. Up to the present time the steamer Fox is the only one that has brought a cargo of coal to the city. The French actor Coquelin came to Constantinople, his repertory was handed to the censors. "Le Malade Imaginaire" could not be played because that seemed to reflect on Abdul Hamid's hypochondria, and "Le Misanthrope" was played, as the Sultan, "Tartuffe, the Hypocrite," was, again, a too sympathetic role; finally, as the Sultan seemed to have the whole lot of Moliere's plays, nothing was left to the distinguished actor but "Le Maitre de Forgerie." The Sultan left his palace only twice a year, on special holy days; the rest of the time he remained behind the lofty walls of Yildiz, protected by the highly paid Albanian guard and a large force of sentries and catered to by a whole village of domestics.

Abdul Hamid's plotting finally caused the mutiny of 1909. Those who lived in Constantinople during the reign of Abdul Hamid were in a constant state of fear. He was a mystery, a fear and a constant sinister influence. We never spoke his name in the street; we never pointed at his palace; we never noticed his outrages. It was best to keep a close mouth and eyes straight ahead in the years I was in his city, says Prof. Jenkins, formerly of the University of Constantinople, speaking of the death of Abdul-Hamid.

Fancy Waist of Georgette and Lace.

Women who are dressing well on a year income are devoting much attention to separate blouses instead of entire costumes. This model is in georgette, trimmed with charming satin and lace.

As a necessity of the smart wardrobe, the fancy separate waist is apparent. Crepe georgette is used for many of the most successful models, the one pictured here being typical. It is in the fashionable pale yellow, built upon a lining into which the sleeves are set and trimmed with embroidery and lace. The girle is a feature of the blouse, being made in two pieces, with sash ends attached under the arms and tied at the back.

To reproduce the model in medium sizes requires 2 1/2 yards 36-inch georgette, with 3/4 yard charmuse for the chemise and collar and 1/2 yard lace banding 10 inches wide for the trimming piece.

Before starting to sew the seams of the underbody, face the front for the vest, as indicated on line of small "o" perforations. Then close underarm and shoulder seams as notched. Flat lower edge, turn edge of right front under on line of large "o" perforations and allow the left front to extend for an underlap. Face the armhole edges of front and back about 3 inches deep.

Now, gather the sleeve between "T" perforations. Close seams of sleeve and cuffs as notched, leaving cuff seams free below the notches. Leave sleeve seam free below the small "o" perforation and finish for closing. Face cuffs, arrange cuff D on cuff F with lower edges and notches even; sew to sleeve as notched. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched with small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fullness between the notches. Hold the sleeve toward you when busting it in armhole.

Next, close the under-arm and shoulder seams of outer front and back as notched. Face revers and sew to front edge of front as notched, roll back and baste lower edges together. Gather blouse and cover at lower edge between "T" perforations and 1 inch above. Turn hem at upper edge of trimming piece, at notches. Adjust to position underneath front, matching single large "o" and double small "o" perforations; bring edge of right front to center-front of trimming piece; tack trimming piece to position under right front and finish left side for closing. Face collar and sew to neck edge in back, with center-back even and to front edges of outer front and revers matching notches. Arrange outer waist on underbody and stitch lower edges together.

Then, gather the front and back girle sections between "T" perforations. Join sections as notched on right side, including the end of each in the seam matching the notches; drawing gathers in girle to fit waist end. Finish the left side of girle for closing. Join left sash end to left edge of front girle section matching notches. Gather front girle section at center-front between the small "o" perforations; drawing gathers to a 3-inch space. Arrange girle around waist, with upper back edge at single small "o" perforation in outer back, with center-front and center-back even and close at left side. Tie sash at back.
