PUBLIC LIBRARY BULLETIN
Amongst the books put into circulation for the month of May three books stand out as possessing more than passing interest. These are:
Alens, by William McFee.
The Tree of Heaven, by May Sinclair.
To those who have read "Alens" of the Sea, this second book of Mr. McFee's will be welcomed with such interest. It has much the same charm of the sea, as in his first book. A trace of Conrad is felt here. This story which a story reminds one of those pictures of the old Dutch masters where an inside room is reflected by a mirror on the wall. A group of English artists listen to this strange story of the younger Carvello overhead as the whole life of his elder brother and dominates all the story. One wonders why this quiet reticent sailor should have his history unfold to entire strangers. This seems to be the weak spot in an otherwise interesting and fascinating story.
