At the Theatres

At The Grand.
Madge Evans was supremely charming in her new drama, "Wanted—A Mother," which was presented at the Grand last night. It is an absorbing story and a fascinating role, and Madge does full justice to it. Playing with Madge in this production is George MacQuarrie, who is becoming very popular with the movie fans through having appeared in a large number of World pictures. An O. Henry story, a Lonesome Luke comedy and the Pathe News were also shown along with an act of the best kind of vaudeville. This bill will be repeated to-night for the last time. For Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday there will be a special attraction. Nell Shipman will be seen in her latest starring vehicle, "Cavanaugh of the Forest Rangers," which is a picturization from a famous novel by Hamlin Garland that has enjoyed a wide circulation. Supporting Miss Shipman is Alfred Whitman and both their roles seem truly tailored to their capabilities. There will also be the Pathe News, a Judge Brown story and comedy reels. The vaudeville will consist of Fredo and Primrose in a comedy musical novelty that is sure to catch everybody's fancy.

At Griffin's.
The latest addition to the list of notable characterizations of Mary Pickford, which in recent months have made more secure than ever her fame as the greatest of all screen stars is Bret Hart's western masterpiece, "M'Liss," which was shown at Griffin's last night when the legion of admirers of the popular artist turned out in force, and they emphasized in no uncertain way the popularity of the star, and the superiority of her latest Artercraft vehicle. In this unique role Mary is as usual charming. The character of M'Liss provides her with abundant opportunities for the display of those characteristics which have made her the foremost screen artist in the world. You cannot afford to miss seeing this notable addition to the repertoire of Mary Pickford, which will be given a final presentation this evening, as will also George Walsh in "Brave and Bold," and the eighth episode of the ever interesting serial "The Eagle's Eye."
