Mrs. Wilson Sends Independence Message to Women of America

WASHINGTON, D. C., Thursday.—An Independence Day message to-day was sent to the women of America by Mrs. Wilson, wife of the President. It follows:—

"The greeting which I am glad to send to the women of our beloved country who are playing so large and so noble a part in this day of our supreme test can have but a single thought for its theme—the thought that is in all our hearts.

"That thought is that we are sustaining, not a government, but the very principle of our nation's life. The morale of the war is in the thoughts and aspirations and hopes of the women as well as of the men.

"They stand at the very centre of every issue involved, as the men do, and in that sense the war is theirs. It is a war for what is humane and right. They can put all that is best of them into the struggle. And they are doing so.

"I deeply admire them and am proud to stand with them. A new glory attaches to the 4th of July because we are striving to make the world free."

"VE WALTON INN," CLAYTON

FAMOUS OLD HOSTELRY RE-MODELED AND IMPROVED.

Dates Back 120 Years—Hotel Purchased Last Winter by Fred Ingelhart of Watertown Linked With History of the Village.

The historic Walton House of Clayton, N.Y., has been opened to the public again. It was purchased last winter by Fred Ingelhart, of Watertown, who is also manager of the hotel at Westminster Park. E. S. Pendleton, for several years connected with Adirondack and other large summer resort hotels, will be the manager of "Ve Walton Inn," for by this name the Walton House will be known hereafter.

The entire house has been remodelled and re-furnished, with several changes and improvements. The dining room is in the front of the house, facing the river, and is very attractive. The old bar has been turned into a splendidly equipped writing room, and is adjacent to the office. The addition of new doors and large side windows, make a very attractive office. A grill will be opened later in the season, in the room which has formerly been used for a summer dining room. There will be fine sleeping accommodations for a hundred guests. A specialty will be made of chicken and fish dinners.

When one allows his imagination to carry him back to the "good old days," when the smell of gasoline and the put-put of the motor boat were unknown on the St. Lawrence, he will remember that the popular "Izaak Walton" was the scene of much gaiety and merrymaking. The white bathing sail boats and the exciting sailing races were the fashion on those days, and those fashions were very attractive to the many people who came to spend the summer months at the river.

On the present site of the Walton House has been located a hotel since the earliest historical records of the town, for from the first settlement in the vicinity, the tavern was a necessity to the travelling guests who stopped here on their way to the 1000 Islands. The first building known to have stood on the spot was known as Kellogg's Hotel. This was succeeded by the Northern Hotel, which still stands as a part of the Walton House. The stone part was built about 120 years ago by Thomas Angel, uncle of Mrs. S. D. Johnston, for a residence. The Northern was built about 100 years ago by Thomas Benjamin, who, with his son, Van Benjamin, were proprietors for several years, afterwards selling it to Archie Marshall, and the name was then changed to the Marshall House. It was again sold to Michael Halpin, and in 1849 it was purchased by Stephen Decatur Johnston, who was one of the first landlords of the river to make special of summer visitors. He made extensive improvements, changing from a two-story to three-story structure and building an annex to connect the old Northern with the stone part, and naming it the Izaak Walton. This name, by later came to be synonymous with the sportsman's idea of an ideal hostelry.

Mr. Johnston was proprietor of the hotel for twenty years, and since that time it has changed hands many times, having been closed for frequent intervals for the last few years, and was sold at public auction on Jan. 12, 1918. It is indeed gratifying to note that renewed interest is being taken in this, one of the landmarks of the north country, and the preparations which have been made for the comfort and pleasure of the guests will surely make the place a popular one, as it has been in days of old. Notwithstanding the many changes the years have made, the fishing in the St. Lawrence remains the same, and the guides have been reporting exceptionally good catches in May and June.

With the history this building, the history of the community is very closely associated, for long before the railroads were built in the north country, the regular steamship lines were established and brought many men of distinction to the village, who were attracted by the beautiful scenery. The shipbuilding industry also brought many men of prominence here, and many of them became permanent summer residents, building the many beautiful summer homes. Among the first of these visitors was one of the guests of the Walton, Charles G. Emery, who in later years built his beautiful home on Calumet Island.

S. D. Johnston, who has been mentioned as being proprietor of the hotel for twenty years, was a son of William Johnston, better known as "Bill" Johnston, of patriot war fame. He was a leader in that remarkable movement which probably caused the most exciting times ever known on the border, when an effort was made to overthrow the Canadian government by an invasion of the frontier towns. By his utter disregard for international law, he became an outlaw in both countries, and was forced to go in hiding among the islands of the river while a reward was suspended over his head by both governments for the inexcusable violation of law in the burning of the Robert Peel on May 30, 1838. His daughter, Kate Johnston, sister of Stephen Johnston, became his adviser and real support during his exile, keeping him supplied with provision, clothes and news of the efforts of his enemies toward making his capture. She gained the title "Queen of the River," and earned a wide reputation for her devotion to her father, and her name is closely woven into the legendary remembrance of the St. Lawrence river.

Sequel to Shooting. Belleville, July 10.—Ross Reid, who was severely wounded in the back by the discharge of a shotgun at a charivari on Friday night last, in Thurlow Township, is progressing favorably. John Fitzgerald, father of the young man being married, surrendered to the police and was allowed out on bail at $3,000, to appear Saturday. A charge of assault, occasioning bodily harm, is the charge at present preferred.

Peter McArthur's View. "Like the Government we view the situation from the point of military necessity. We agree with them in the view that food is of the first importance to our armies and to our allies. But we submit that the Government, in taking experienced men from the land, is losing more in food power than it is gaining in man power. The gain in men will not be sufficient to make up for the loss of food."

Continuing, Mr. McArthur said:—"An experienced farmer is equal to only one French, British or American soldier on the firing line. On the Canadian farm he is equal to at least ten men on European farms."

In Ekfrid Township, Middlesex County, where Mr. McArthur resides, there was one man to every 100 acres of land, later one man to every 160 acres, and when the new Military Service order-in-Council had taken its toll of young farmers there would be one man for every 200 acres.

A Question. Farmer Turnipson had brought his young son David to the city to see the sights, and toward the end of a long day was dragging his fourteen stone up the steps of the great monument. Long before they reached the top the father was regretting that he had allowed his son to persuade him to undertake such a trying journey. "Look, father!" exclaimed the boy when they had at last reached the top. "Isn't it a grand sight down there?"

A Safe Bet. The late Capt. Vernon Castle, the famous dancer who trained aviators in Canada all last summer, was popular with the flying cadets under him. Capt. Castle had a cheery way with him. A cadet one morning awaited rather nervously in the flying field his "solo hop," as the first flight alone is called. Capt. Castle, noticing the cadet's perturbation, slapped him gayly on the shoulder and said: "Cheer up, man. Don't be nervous. You'll come down again. There's no known instance of an aeroplane ever falling to come down."

The tanks used in the war may be of great value in reclaiming the country for agricultural purposes after the conflict.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary multifid coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffly and easy to manage.

You can get multifid coconut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.
