At Cornwall, Eva Pearl Martin, the nineteen-year-old Millie Roches girl committed to stand her trial on a charge of bigamy, appeared before Judge O'Reilly. In view of the fact that she had fallen into the hands of a bad man while yet a mere youth, he imposed a light sentence, four months at hard labor in the Cornwall jail.

DROWNING AT CORNWALL

Twelve Year Old Boy Lost Life in Mill Race.

Cornwall, July 25.—Huntley Mac-Donald, the twelve-year-old son of Archibald J. MacDonald, of North Lancaster, clerk of the township of Lancaster, was drowned in a mill race at the Toronto Paper Co.'s mill Tuesday afternoon.

The boy had been spending a couple of weeks in town visiting.
To-day he was riding a bicycle about the paper mill and in going through a driveway between two of the buildings it is thought he did not make a turn quickly enough, the wheel running against an iron protecting bar on the top of the stone wall of the mill-race, throwing him into the swiftly-running water. The body has not yet been recovered.

With Getting Goods Under False Pretences.

J. Abramsky, 265 Princess street, informed the Whig on Thursday morning that he intended taking action against a citizen whom he claims secured a suit of clothes and a pair of boots from his shop under false pretences. The suit was valued at $25 and the boots $10.
Mr. Abramsky stated that the purchase was made on Friday last, and that the man who got the goods gave him his promise that he would call the next day, when he would receive his pay, and make a settlement. He did not come with the money, and Mr. Abramsky has been endeavoring to locate him, but states that from what he could as-

HEAT AFFECTED HIS BRAIN

POOR "BILL" COLLINS IMAGINED HE WAS IN THE SHOW BUSINESS.

Blackened His Face And Was Acting As Chief Booster For Tom Marks and "Bringing Up Father"—In Police Cells On a Charge of Vagrancy —Remanded for Week.

Poor "Bill" Collins, the hot weather has affected his head. On Wednesday he imagined that he was an advance agent for Tom Marks celebrated show, and to attract attention he got some black paint and decorated his face in such an artistic manner that his own mother would not have known him. After putting the flashing touches to his painting, he got a neat little rosette, and pinned it on his coat. Then he was all ready to boost the biggest show on earth.

Part of the time he was telling of the wonders of Tom Marks and his all star cast, and at other times, he was describing that side-splitting play, "Bringing Up Father." He was just bubbling over with enthusiasm, and as an advance man, who would have taken the cake, but Collins was the same old time, that is to say he got to be a nuisance on the street, and the police had to take action.

Police Constable Thomas Mullinger corralled Collins, and he was taken to the police station to cool off. Here he kept on talking about the great show he was representing, and kept up a lively line of talk until the curtain went up in the police court on Thursday morning.
Vagrancy was the charge the police put against him.

Collins presented quite a sight when he bobbed up in the prisoners' box with his black face. Guy Bros. would have picked him out as a star minstrel if they could but have been present. Collins was amazed when the magistrate told him that he was accused of being a vagrant.

"I'm everything but a vagrant," he said to the magistrate. "Do I look like a vagrant?"

"No, you certainly don't," replied the Cadi, sizing up Collins's makeup.
"Well sir, I have certainly been working hard since 4 o'clock this morning," added the accused.

"There are men here in this court who know that I can do anything." Acting Sergt. Samuel Arnel was called to the stand to throw some light on the case. "He will not work, and has been loafing around the streets making a nuisance of himself," said the officer. "He has been telling the people he was an agent for Tom Marks and his show."

At this stage of the proceedings Collins took part in the conversation.
He pointed to a sparkler on his finger and said that it was a ring that "Tom" Marks had given him. Then pointing to the badge of honor, which he very proudly displayed on his coat he said, "one of the girls in the show gave me that for singing a song on the railway platform."

By this time, Magistrate Farrell had heard enough to convince him that Collins was due for a week in jail to give him a chance to get over his brain storm, so he decided to give him a week's rest.

Collins had just one request to make before being taken away, and this was to see Constable Mullinger.
"He's the man who put me here, and I would just like to see him before I go," he said.

"I guess you can see him all right," said the magistrate, as he finally disposed of the case.
"All right, good-bye," was Collins' parting shot, as he passed out on his way to the cells.

Liquor License Inspector William McCammon was present in connection with a couple of adjourned cases in which liquor had been left uncal-led for a local express office. In one case he was given an order to confis-cate the liquor, while the other case was enlarged for a week.

INDICIOUS SAYS MONTREALER In regard to the Discrimination At Oswego.
Montreal, July 24.—In connection with the report from Kingston, Ont., that the Ogdensburg Towing Co., in conjunction with the Canada Steamship Lines, is attempting to restrict the movement of anthracite coal, Dr.
W. L. McDougall, president of the Ogdensburg Coal and Towing Co., states that it is absolutely ridiculous and without the slightest foundation.
"I cannot understand," Dr. Mc-Dougall says, "why the Canada Steamship Lines should have been mentioned in this connection. Their steamers have not carried, this year, a pound of anthracite coal for our company and are not interested in any way."
The Ontario dealers receiving their supply of coal from this company via Oswego, as a matter of fact, have nothing to complain of, and up to date we have had no intimation that they were dissatisfied with the treatment accorded them. We have succeeded in getting a larger allotment of coal for those dealers this year than for 1917, and they have already obtained almost the total quantity they received last year."
