Plays "Overlap."
The speed of baseball is at first confusing to the English mind. An American who sat next to an Englishman at Chelsea recently undertook to explain to his neighbor different plays as they occurred. Several times the Englishman exclaimed: "That ball! Where is it now, please? Awfully hard to watch it fly back and forth, you know."

And again, when the shortstop of the team in the field snapped up a grounder and started a double play by way of second base:
"Really, plays move so swiftly that they overlap, don't they?"

If a man is unable to say nothing and saw wood he should at least try to do one or the other.
If a man is a liar he's likely to get mad when he is called one.

Sporting Notes

THE SONG OF THE BOWLER.
A golf game has its merits. Horse racing has its charm. Tennis is a pastime that won't do you any harm. All these sports are healthy, but you won't like them again. Once you've joined the happy crowd which plays the bowling game.

I've never won a tournament. I've never won a cup. And many of my friends advise me to give bowling up. But while the game's a-going you will find me going to. For bowling does the same to me that chalk does to a cue.

I may feel awfully tired or I may feel awfully dry. I might revive my spirits with a little drop of rye. It's not because I'm prudish or it's not because I'm tame. But when I feel most downcast I join a bowling game.

I've just become a member of the Western O. B. A. I've entered the big tournament which opens up to-day. Two hundred jolly bowlers I will meet before I'm through. And though I may not win a prize, I'll win a friend or two.

Baseball is a manly sport, we're told from time to time. And princes most enjoy the game that's played with hook and line. Basketball's resorted to when downward pours the rain. But all these sports are nothing to an old-time bowling game.

Outfielder Lamar, of the Toledo club, has enlisted in the U.S. Aviation Service. Lamar is the property of the New York Americans, and was with Baltimore last season.

Wilber Mulligan, the former Pastime star, is playing for an American team in England. Mulligan has been in the hospital for some time, but is again starring in baseball circles.

Horses Well Named.
The naming of horses sometimes gives rise to good stories. It was said that one bright spring morning two colts were born at Elmenendorf, in Kentucky, the home of Col. D. B. Swigert. Mrs. Swigert happened to visit the city on that day and made several purchases, which she displayed to her lord and master on her return home.

Colonel Swigert never had a reputation for excessive generosity, and when he viewed the result of his wife's shopping expedition, he waxed somewhat wrathful.
"I was just thinking of naming those thoroughbred colts, madam," said he, "and I think I shall name one of them in your honor. I shall call him Spendthrift."

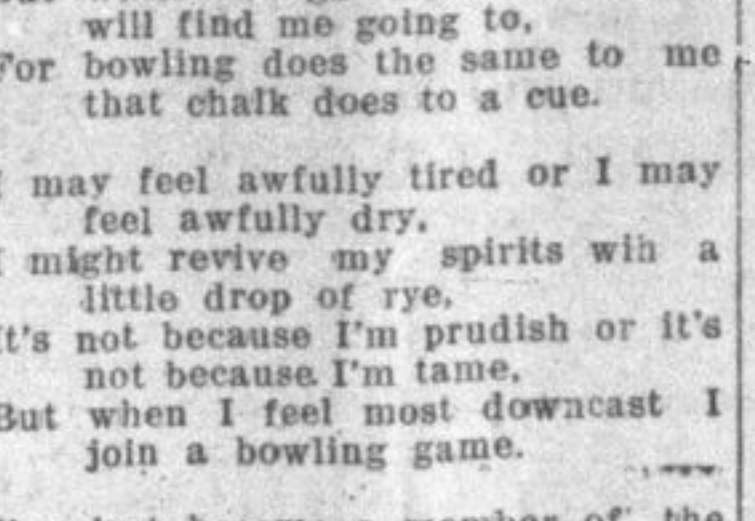

"A thousand thanks, Colonel," returned the owner of Elmenendorf, tartly.
"Well, that being the case, Colonel," resumed the lady, "I shall name the other one for you and call him Miser."

BOSS OF FIRST SACKERS.
Chase Astounds New Yorkers by His Great Work.
Hal Chase has seen a lot of first basemen-come and go since he came out of California years ago and started major league sack, but he is still supreme among the "door tenders" of the National League. He is a kid no longer, yet he moves about with the same grace and agility that always stamped his play, and he still ranks among the league's best hitters. Prince Hal made a number of plays in the series between the Giants and Reds that no other first baseman in the league could make. Furthermore, he enjoys the distinction of being one of the few members of the Cincinnati club who are never hooted by the fickle Redland fans. The bugs out there swear by him, but never at him.

Easy Win For Leonard.
At Jersey City Benny Leonard, lightweight champion of the world, scored a technical knockout over Young Gradwell of Newark, in the fifth round of an eight-round match. Leonard knocked his opponent down twice in the fifth round, and the referee stopped the fight.

Some Essentials on the Diamond.

If you can find a bunch more essential than the following, the editor is willing to step aside and cry quits. Kindly note the batting order:

- Coffey, Tigers, shortstop.
- Wheat, Dodgers, leftfield.
- Lamb, Joplin, second base.
- Weavers, Syracuse, first base.
- Rice, ex-Senators, right field.
- Haddock, Binghamton, catcher.
- Mays, Cards, centre field.
- Bacon, ex-Athletics, third base.
- Hogg, Philadelphia, pitcher.
- Crum of the Boston, would make a fairly good substitute.

A number of essential workers can be dug up, including Miller, Dodgers; Butcher, Fort Worth; Fisher, Cards; Barber, Cubs, and Baker, Yankees.

As far as vital aids what could be more to be desired than Wood, Indians; Steele, Pirates; and Meadows, Cards?

Still Hopeful of Racing.
In the midst of his war work Sir Thomas Lipton is preparing for the battle of peace. He has Shamrock IV, in New York and the ship will be ready for the America's Cup races as soon as the war ends.

Sir Thomas is eager that Chicago sailors be represented on his boat in the effort to lift the cup from New York. So he has chosen Sheldon Clark, one of the best known yachtsmen and a particular friend, to sail on the Shamrock in the big contests.

England wants to buy baseball uniforms and equipment for 2,000 aspiring ball players. From time to time it was understood that the baseball game was obtaining a foothold on the tight little Isle, but none of us were prepared for this overwhelming evidence of the same. The American soldiers, training there, however, have brought about the change.

When Doyle Met Cobb.

Soon after the Yankees secured a pitcher named "Slow Joe" Doyle a few years ago, the Tigers rumped into New York headed by the illustrious Mr. Cobb. That same afternoon Doyle was set to the mound. The dead-off Tiger in the first inning arrived at first through an error. The next was safe on a fielder's choice. Two on, none out—and up struts Tyrus Raymond. The catcher hustled to Doyle and said:

"Joe that's Cobb at the plate. Let's pass him."
"Say, I ain't passing anybody that I can strike out," responded the confident Doyle.

The catcher tried to argue Doyle into passing Cobb. But Doyle was obstinate.
"I'm going to stick 'em right over and strike out that Cobb," insisted Doyle, utterly ignoring the catcher's signals, grooved three for Cobb—and Cobb struck out.

"Didn't I tell you it could be done?" grinned the elated Doyle as the inning ended.

The next time Cobb ambled to the plate, Doyle grooved just one—and Tyrus nearly knocked down the fence with a screeching triple. Doyle still confident, grooved it for Ty on his third trip—and Ty bunted safely. When the "South-ern Typhoon" stepped up for the fourth time, Doyle had come to the conclusion that perhaps it was a little safer to pass Cobb. So he threw a pitch-out—and Ty reached over and straightened it for a two-bagger.

"Say," ruefully admitted Doyle after the game, "I guess this Cobb guy ain't such an awful dub after all."
