GRAPPLING IS RESUMED

IN EFFORT TO LOCATE BODY OF MAJOR W. J. S. SHARP.

The Authorities Trying to Ascertain if the Missing Casualties Officer Has Really Been Drowned.

The search for the body of Major W. J. S. Sharp was renewed yesterday, under the direction of Lieut. Askwith and Lieut. Martin, of the Canadian Engineers. Members of the military police dragged with grappling irons but failed to locate the body. Dynamite was then employed and twenty-six charges were set off with the hope of causing the body to rise to the surface of the water, but without result. A strong east wind was blowing on the morning of Saturday last and if the body floated it would have gone toward the shore. A heavy charge of dynamite was used here and the boat was raised above the water. Those experienced in the use of dynamite in the water say that the concussion would invariably raise a body.

Lieut. Askwith said: "We are doing our best to ascertain whether or not Major Sharp's body is in the water, and we have made a thorough search in the water for a considerable distance around the spot where the clothing was found."

The military police are rendering assistance in the solution of the mystery and a special agent is also employed. The work will be carried on unremittingly and every clue will be traced in an effort to account for Major Sharp's disappearance.

Major W. J. S. Sharp was a native of Dundee, Scotland. For five years before he enlisted to go overseas with the 21st Battalion, he was employed in the Timber and Grazing Branch of the Department of Interior, Ottawa. He was born April 26th, 1886, and came to Canada about ten years ago.

Nab Ten Alleged Evaders.

Ottawa, Aug. 10.—Ten men, alleged to be fit for military service, two shotguns and one rifle, were gathered in when Capt. J. J. Graham and his squad of military and civil police raided shanties in the lonely woods of Cantley Township, Gatineau district, opposite Cascades, on the Bate and McMahon limits.

The men claim they were employed by the foreman for Bate and McMahon, an Ottawa firm. The men tried to run away, but did not show fight.

At the Theatres

At the Grand.

The trials and tribulations that a working girl is forced to put up with were forcibly presented on the screen in "Whims of Society," the new World picture Brady-made in which charming Ethel Clayton was starred, which was shown at the Grand last night. This was an entirely different picture, and one in which Miss Clayton had great opportunity to display her wonderful acting talent. There was also the Pathe News, a Lonesome Luke comedy, and an O. Henry story, along with a novelty vaudeville act that drew rounds of applause. This programme will be given its last showing to-night. For Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week Edward Earle, Florence Deshon and Agnes Ayres will all be starred in the Vitagraph feature "One Thousand Dollars." This story has to deal with a young man who is cut off in his millionaire uncle's will with $1,000, and how he tries to spend it so as to come into the rest of the fortune makes an interesting picture. The Pathe News, a good comedy, and other films, besides an act of the very best vaudeville, will complete a fine evening's entertainment.

At Griffin's.

This popular theatre was last evening the scene of a most enthusiastic audience, who were unanimous in their praise of our superb feature, that "master of screencraft," J. Stuart Blackton. This is indeed a master production from every standpoint. It deals with a splendid story of love and war, in which practically an all-star cast appears. It is one of the most unusual photoplays seen at our theatre this season. Vivian Martin, one of the most popular screen favorites, added many new admirers to an already long list in her newest photoplay, "Viviette," which proved decidedly entertaining to the audience. In addition to these two genuinely good features, a stunning episode of "The Eagle's Eye" winds up the programme.
