Not even Lansdowne can save the Hohenzollerns now.

Procrastination is the thief of time, and the plunder can never be recovered.

The price of victory, even though it totals thousands of heroic dead, is never as high as the cost of defeat.

If batches of 140 armed Germans continue to be captured by parties of four Canadians, how long will the Kaiser's army last?

The Hamilton Times does not want the Kaiser killed. It hopes he will live long enough to be exhibited in all Allied countries after the war.

The first thing that is essential to Allied success in the war is the destruction of the elaborately constructed theory that Germany is unconquerable.

The peace that Germany would like to give the Allies is the peace it has given to Russia, a peace with Germany acting as dictator and absorber.

It is estimated in the United States that the wheat yield this year will be 900,000,000 bushels, or 25,000,000 more than last year's.

The Minister of Education says nothing would have persuaded him to take up the duties of minister other than the opportunity to do his extra bit in helping in the development of Ontario's young citizens.

In Scranton, Pa., the mayor will not let the villages bella kiss the soldiers en route to France.

After January 1st, 1919, American automobile manufacturers must not make pleasure cars.

The summer is over and the members of the government are gathering at Ottawa. Canadians are looking for a spirited conduct of public affairs.

Harvesting is now at its height. Fall wheat and barley are practically all cut and considerable quantities threshed.

Good roads through the farming districts provide distinct advantages. Better facilities for the education of the children, improved social conditions and more opportunity for pleasure.

A stand-up battle between the German and Allied fleets is extremely unlikely. Since the battle of Jutland in August, 1916, the German high fleet has not shown its nose out of the Bight of Heligoland.

Perhaps the Food Control Board might cause some comfort by summoning up enough courage to announce that butter next winter must not sell at more than $1 a pound.

AN OCCASION FOR JOY. We have gone over the crest and we are driving instead of being driven.

The unified system of command is winning. General Foch has proved himself to be a great discovery as a military genius.

Russia is turning against the Kaiser and toward the Allies. America is arriving with ever increasing number of troops.

NATIONAL ANTHEM RENDERING. Creator, the noted Italian band conductor, has startled the musical critics of Montreal with a daring and impressive rendering of the British National Anthem.

It's in the Air. A good Yankee farmer will plow one neighbor's field in the morning and help raise another neighbor's barn in the afternoon.

The Kiss Ration. A medical opinion in favor of rationing kisses has been expressed. When other lips, of richer hue, my fancy would caress.

A Menace Still. The notion that because the U-boats have failed of their primary purpose, which was to eliminate England from the war and thus bring a speedy victory for Germany, they may be neglected, must not be harbored.

HURRY AND HEALTH. Don't hurry. It wears the system like worry. It is especially harmful in hot weather.

Hurry exhausts twice the energies in a given time than would be required to accomplish twice the work if undertaken in a leisurely manner.

A GENEROUS DONATION. The gift of John Bell Carruthers to Queen's University of five thousand dollars in memory of his deceased son, Major K. B. Carruthers, is most generous.

After January 1st, 1919, American automobile manufacturers must not make pleasure cars. This is a ruling of the War Industries Board.

for honors in Arts and Science. The world is in need of men, ripe in experience, unprejudiced in judgment, balanced in view point, and sound in understanding.

The men trained in the practical university of the experience derived from social contact with their fellows are ideal for the further instruction in the intellectual universities.

PUBLIC OPINION

No Light Needed. (Florida Times-Union) Even if a girl meets a second lieutenant in the dark she can always remember exactly the color of his eyes and hair.

Fashions in Hun Raiment. (Albany Argus) It is said that the German soldiers are now wearing paper pants. Looks as if they would soon be wearing olive branches.

Among the "Cats and Dogs." (Pittsburgh Gazette) A few more drives like this one and shares of Bolshevism common will be offered at 100 per cent below par, with no takers.

Made Men of Them. (Baltimore Sun) And to think, lots of those brave fellows that are pushing the Germans back to the Rhine, only a few months ago were sittin' on the balcony of their quiet American homes playin' the ukulele.

Extra, Kaiser Licks an Army. (El Paso Times) The Kaiser has confiscated all the property of the Salvation Army in his kingdom and by imperial order dissolved the organization. So the Huns have found one army they can lick.

Boosting the Booster. Boost your city, boost your friend; Boost the church that you attend; Boost the street on which you're dwelling.

Can we ever repay our men so brave, Facing perils of battle our freedom to save? We will honor the dead and care for the living; It seems all we can do for the service they're giving.

Boosting the Booster. Boost your city, boost your friend; Boost the church that you attend; Boost the street on which you're dwelling.

Boost for every forward movement; Boost for every new improvement; Boost the man for whom you labor; Boost the stranger and the neighbor.

Case to be a chronic knocker; Cease to be a Progress-blocker; If you'd make your city better, Boost it to the final letter.

Rippling Rhymes

AUGUST HEAT My fat old form is wilting in heat that does not cease, and I'm no longer litting a song of joy and peace.

My fat old form is wilting in heat that does not cease, and I'm no longer litting a song of joy and peace. I'm groaning smoking phrases the censor says are wrong; the day is hot as blazes, and seems a fortnight long.

—WALT MASON.

THINGS THAT NEVER HAPPEN

Roll-Call After the Victory. (As suggested by an account of a German raid repulsed by a company of our men.) "Sergeant Brown," the Lieutenant cried.

There they stood in the falling light While slowly gathered the shades of night; These men of battle so valiant and brave, Bent on their country's freedom to save.

Down in the field where the poppies grew, Were redder stains than the bright flowers knew; The stones on the hillside were splashed with blood, And crimson-dyed was the river's flood.

For the foeman had crossed from the other side, And their life blood went to color the tide; They had come in the face of the terrible fire Which had swept them back in its fiercest ire.

"Gilbert Howe," silence. Then a soldier said: "As he raised the flag they shot him dead. Howe gave our company the signals, you know, He fell as we served that swift stroke at the foe."

"David Johnston," silence. Not a voice was heard. "Edward Johnston," Again no one spoke a word, These brothers, gallant, noble and true, Had both fallen in seeking their duty to do.

'Twas a victory! Yes, and it cost us dear, For many men failed to say the word "Here." They had lain down their lives for liberty's cause, They had sacrificed all to protect our good laws.

Can we ever repay our men so brave, Facing perils of battle our freedom to save? We will honor the dead and care for the living; It seems all we can do for the service they're giving.
