station for dinner. We were allowed fifteen minutes. At these eating places the food is put on a long table. You buy a ticket and help yourself. That is, you help yourself if you can. The men on the train rushed the dining-room. They were as thick as flies. You saw no table, only backs and legs. It was tantalizing. There was no slipping a head or arm in anywhere. At every meal throughout the journey it was the same. I should have starved before I reached Stockholm if it hadn't been for a young American Y.M.C.A. man. He must have been a football player before he joined the Y.M.C.A. He was six feet tall and had a mighty muscle. Brute force and tips won. He and I always got food.

"The next day we were many hours late. We arrived at eating stations at ten, four and six. Outside, the storm still raged. We reached the last station in Finland late at night, too late to cross to Sweden. Our train pulled up on a siding, and there it stayed. That night there were no sheets, but we were given a blanket apiece. I had become used to sleeping in my clothes. I needed them for warmth. I rolled up tight in the blanket.

"In the morning we were still on the siding. By nine it was light. At ten the hungry men were fuming for their breakfast, but we were in the middle of snowbanks. An engine-house was the only visible building. The thermometer stood at forty below zero. The Y.M.C.A. man appeared, radiant and smiling. 'I have a plan. Come along. We'll get breakfast.' He tried to open the train door, but it was locked. We were prisoners until we reached the station and our passports had been examined. But my companion was dauntless. He made for the last car. The door to the rear platform was open. We climbed up over the rail and jumped into the snow. Then we ran to the engine-house. Inside we found the engineer. Several kroners produced the desired effect. He oiled up, and the Y.M.C.A. man helped me into the engine. I sat beside the engine-driver, and he pulled the whistle. With a puff, we moved out of the building. It was a joyous but chilly ride to the station. We bumped into a freight car on the way and took it along. We had a great breakfast and three cups of coffee—the first in many a day."

Baby's Great Danger During Hot Weather More little ones die during the hot weather than at any other time of the year. Diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum and stomach troubles come without warning, and when a medicine is not at hand to give promptly the short delay too frequently means that the child has passed beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in homes where there are young children. An occasional dose of the Tablets will cure the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Price of Marriages Going Up. Amsterdam, Aug. 17.—Getting married in Germany has become a pretty expensive business since the war started. The fee for simple marriages has gone up from twelve to eighteen marks ($4.50), while anything on a grand scale costs thirty-five marks ($8.75). Even baptisms have suffered the same treatment.

Only nations that retain in war their industrial strength fight victoriously. Industrial strength does not mean the maintenance of the production of luxuries, but the production at maximum of useful things.
