W. R. GIVENS' TRIP ABROAD

KINGSTON EDITOR VISITS THE WESTERN BATTLEFRONT.

Saw Various Kingston Men—The General Feeling Over There Is That Germany's Collapse Is Daily Growing Nearer.
 W. R. Givens, publisher of the Standard, who for the past ten weeks has been overseas and at the French and Flanders war fronts, as one of the newspaper guests of the British Government, returned to the city on Friday afternoon, after what he declares to be a most remarkable trip. While abroad the members of the party were received by President Poincaré and Premier Clemenceau of France; by King George and the Queen, and by Premier Lloyd-George; while they met Sir Douglas Haig, British commander-in-chief, at his headquarters and were banqueted by a number of leading English statesmen.
 They were at the French and Flanders war fronts for two weeks, from Verdun on the one end to Ypres on the other, and they saw the gigantic preparations making for the present big drive, which is being waged so successfully.
 They spent several days with the Canadian forces and saw a number of Kingstonians, including Lieut.-Col. Elmer Jones (since killed) and Major Harry Pense, of the 21st Battalion; and on all sides they heard the highest praise bestowed upon the Canadians for their gallantry and dash and daring spirit—"the best fighters on the line," as one man characterized it.
 On several occasions they were in the front line trenches and within but a few hundred yards of the Germans, while on the day they visited Ypres that devastated city was being subjected to a heavy bombardment which did not add to the comfort or the pleasure of the visitors.
 Mr. Givens speaks in the highest praise of the wonderful work and sacrifices of the women of Great Britain and France, who to-day are not only tilling the soil but are doing men's work, and of the heaviest kind, in factories and munition plants, handling heavy work in an amazing manner, and having no hesitancy in operating anti-aircraft guns and the like. They are at work, too, on the railroad shops and in the ship yards; and always their work is well done.
 The Grand Fleet was visited and the latest battleships, battle cruisers and destroyers were seen, while at the ship yards the Clyde other great ships were seen in the making.
 The whole spirit of the people is admirable and the voice of the pacifist is, says Mr. Givens, as a voice in the wilderness, for the people are determined to see this thing through to the bitter end until Germany is finally and completely defeated. The inspiring of American troops has greatly cheered the brave men who have been doing the fighting in the earlier years of the war, and no where is there now to be heard any note of despair. To the contrary, the general feeling is that the tide of battle has at last set in definitely for the Allies and that Germany's collapse is daily growing nearer.
