At the Theatres

At The Grand.

The Grand presented a high class bill last evening in the form of the five-act Metro feature, "The Demon," and this wonderful picture was well received by the capacity audience. Edith Storey, one of Metro's celebrated stars, played the titular role and had in her support many other favorites who gave the picture a touch of distinction that made it much more interesting and entertaining. The story dealt with a young American youth who went to Africa to claim his fortune and while there he bought a girl from an Algerian slave market. He put her in a school and many years after he again returned to that country and found the girl, now grown to womanhood, and by so doing he also found that she was the real heiress to the fortune that he had received. Besides this remarkable photoplay there was also the Pathe News, a Lonesome Luke comedy, an O. Henry story and other good reels. An act of exceptionally good vaudeville, which consisted of O'Brien and Ainsley, singing cartoonists, completed this programme, which will be repeated to-night for the last time.

At The Strand.

Magnetic Madge Kennedy appears at last in a real out-and-out drama. It is "The Service Star," and, as its title indicates, is of extreme timeliness, appealing as it does to every owner of a service flag. Marilyn March, a girl of extreme plainness, yearns for a soldier or sailor sweetheart such as every other girl has. In desperation she announces that she is the wife of a soldier whose heroism is proclaimed in all the newspapers. At once the young man's mother seeks her out and in terror Marilyn faces her, sure that she will be exposed as an impostor. But the mother takes the girl to her heart—and her home. Marilyn's story is accepted without a question and she is transformed from an unprepossessing girl to a lovely young matron. Marilyn's mental suffering is agonizing when news comes of her husband's death, and later arrangements are made to make her his heiress. This is more than Marilyn can stand and she prepares to go away from the mother and the young man who occupies a room in the house. Marilyn has met him by accident and by chance she makes a discovery which arouses her suspicion. In a flash it comes to her that the young man in reality is the son whose wife she is pretending to be and who is evading the draft. Furious she takes the mother with her, and the mother and the older woman breaks down, confessing everything.

At Griffin's.

Many patrons of high class photo-plays assembled at this popular play-house last evening and thoroughly enjoyed the entertaining programme exhibited. J. Stuart Blackton's superb feature, "Wild Youth," adapted from the story by Sir Gilbert Parker, proved in every way up to the high standard set by this great producer. It contains all the accessories required in the making of a super-play, including one of the greatest all-star casts ever assembled in one production. The foremost players are Louise Huff, James Cruze and Theodore Roberts. This picture is one of the theatrical treats of the season. Another charming feature is "The Eagle's Eye," which gives this beautiful star an opportunity for her best work and proved immensely popular with the audience. The final chapter of "The Eagle's Eye" winds up a very fine bill and this episode is sure to please and satisfy all who are interested in this story. To-night will be the last opportunity to see these noteworthy productions. Don't overlook it.

Took Aged to Church.

It has been the custom of a number of persons owning automobiles to call and take aged people to church on Sunday, who otherwise could not go. Last Sunday these old persons did not get to church. The question is asked if such automobiles could not run to church on Sunday with a white flag, denoting their purpose.

HIT A "SILENT POLICEMAN."

Traffic Officer on Wellington Street Met With Foul Play.

There are some mean people in the world. Some time on Friday some person, evidently in an automobile, hit the "silent policeman" who looks after the traffic at the corner of Wellington and Union streets. The policeman got a blow that almost knocked him over. He was badly bent, but is still able to be on duty. His injuries will be attended to by the city engineer.

The attention of the public is drawn to the fact that there is a penalty of $25 and costs, for striking a policeman, so it is a case of beware.
