TELLS OF HIS WOUNDING

LIEUT. GEORGE GRANGER TELLS OF BATTLE IN FRANCE.

He Was Wounded After He Had Taken Charge of His Company—He Suffered Intense Pain on the Stretcher, But Is Improving Now. The following letter was received by Mrs. George Granger, Vine street, from her husband, Lieut. George Granger, a prominent Salvation Army worker here, who was wounded while in action with the 21st Battalion:

"I have received a very nasty wound in my side, and after the operation the doctors tell me that I had a good clean cut on the outside. But they say it must have spread, for they found eleven small holes in my stomach and intestines. So you can imagine I am in a pretty bad shape. I have to lie on my back very quietly and am not allowed anything except water, jelly and tea. Have been on this diet for five days, and to-morrow I expect some bread. The doctors and nurses say I am a marvel of the age to stand what I have and not show any effects. My temperature has never gone above 101. I tell them that is what a clean life does for a fellow, and I have barrels of vitality left yet. I am at the first clearing station and as soon as I am fit I shall be moved to England. But owing to the nature of my wounds I have to be very quiet until all the small holes are healed up.

"Now I will try and give you a little account of the battle. We started our advance out over 'no man's land' on Aug. 26th, at 3 a.m., and at six we had our objective, a distance of about three miles. We met with very little opposition at the beginning, but in holding the position we had quite a few casualties. Our company commander was wounded, and I was put in charge. The next day at 11 a.m. we went over the top again and reached our objective after very heavy fighting. We lost a few men, but we certainly accounted for a good number of Huns. We then pulled ourselves together again and reorganized and went over the top again the next day at 12 noon, and was only out about an hour when I got my knockout, and I tumbled into a shell hole and lay there for two and a half hours until a stretcher bearer came to me. My batman was a wonderful fellow. He stuck right by me, and did all in his power to get me assistance. We had to be very careful, as there was a Fritz sniping at us all the time, but he must have been a bad shot, for we came out scot free. My suffering was intense on the stretcher coming out, but let me say that God was very dear to me all the time, and I know that without His power I should never have come through. The doctors and nurses are very kind, and I am receiving the best of attention, and hope to be around again soon."

At the Theatres

At the Grand.
For the first two days of this week only the Grand will offer a picture that will be sure to win instant admiration. Talented Nell Shipman, the beautiful star who made such a hit in "Cavanaugh of the Forest Rangers," will have the stellar role in "The Wild Strain," which is a picture with a punch. Everyone will remember the work done by her in former films, but this one has them all beaten for its absorbing entertainment value. Supporting Miss Shipman are all the old Vitagraph favorites such as Alfred Whitman, Otto Lederer, Laura Winston, R. Bradbury and many other such screen artists. "The Wild Strain" tells the story of a young girl who has many adventures after leaving home because family honor was too much for her. There will also be the Pathe News, one of those screamingly funny big "V" comedies and two thousand feet of other exceptionally good film. For the evening, the good film, "Freemans," will present their wire novelty act that is a dandy. Don't forget that this bill will be shown for two days only, as "Eyes of Youth" will be the attraction on Wednesday.

At the Strand.
All adventures are successful to the adventurous, but this "Successful Adventure" is especially successful, for at the end of it, like heart's ease after pain, is dear little, sweet little Virginia Houston, a southern beauty, played by another southern beauty, May Allison. The title of the "Successful Adventure" doesn't give half an inkling of the charm and excitement of this brilliant comedy-drama. As Virginia Houston, Miss Allison undertakes to heal an old family feud. This she does by masquerading as a servant in the household of her own uncle. There she meets mystery, love and danger. There is something about "A Successful Adventure" and the star as Virginia—that steals into the heart and stays there. Laughter, tears and thrills are all present in this five-act photoplay. A celebrated cast interprets this attractive feature, which contrasts northern and southern locations, and a masked ball at a fashionable country club is among the interesting scenes.

At Griffin's.
A programme of distinct merit has been secured by the management for the first three days of the week, and is headlined by dainty Enid Bennett in her newest photoplay entitled "The Key to Righteousness," which is said to be the most successful of Miss Bennett's film career. All who have seen this delightful star in "Naughty, Naughty," or "A Desert Wooing," will understand the merits of a Bennett production. In "The Key to Righteousness" Miss Bennett is given an opportunity for brilliant work, and to say she makes the most of this opportunity, and the result is a production that will compare favorably with any seen at this theatre this season. The supporting cast is of the best, and combined with flawless photography and first-class direction, make this picture a distinct treat.
