He has worked with all his might for the fair and the citizens of Kingston are beginning to realize what a herculean task he has performed for no one ever saw a fair like it in Kingston. Everything has gone on like clock work. The weather on Tuesday morning was chilly and rain threatened once or twice but the attendance was estimated at 20,000. Nothing could stop the enthusiasm of the visitors. Everybody wanted to see everything and there was someand the day might be properly called the farmers' day. They came, not It only from Frontenac but from the adjoining counties as well. All the troops of the garrison had a half holiday and took advantage of the opportunity to see the fair.
