

In the World of Sport

SOME OF THE YOUTHFUL STARS OF THE YEAR.

The Youngsters Who Have Shone in the Various Athletic Arenas.

A few new stars twinkled through the smoke of battle this year. They are all youngsters, too, and most of them registered for the draft the other day under the "eighteen to twenty-one" ruling. Their performances are too worthy to remain hidden under the turmoil of conflict, so here they are.

The most sensational of the lot was young Jack Dempsey, a 185-pound batter from the west, who tore right through the ranks of the heavyweights and finished up with a 20-second knockout of a big Fred Fulton. (This Dempsey is a real fighter—the best that has appeared in many years, and is without doubt the best ring fighter in the world to-day. Jess Willard, the ungrateful and unpopular mammoth, has refused to meet him, and well he might, for Dempsey would whipe him unmercifully unless Jess did a deal of training.)

Jack met with a setback a few nights ago out in San Francisco at the hands of Willie Meehan, but the affair was only a four-round go, and not a genuine test.

Law Tandler, a Philadelphia lightweight, who only tips the scales around 130 pounds, has been knocking them all over in first-class style.

Baseball developed quite a few youngsters this year through necessity. The war cut deep into the ranks of the ball clubs and the vacancies were filled with veterans and kids, some of whom made the most of the chance given them. Among these were "Kid" Hollister, the star player of the Chicago Cubs. This diminutive bit of activity not only fielded in great style, but led the club in batting. Another find was Bill Southworth of the Pittsburgh Pirates. This chap led the National League in batting this year, which is a remarkable achievement, particularly for a young player just breaking in.

Herb Thormahlen of the Yankees, Scott Pery, the much discussed pitcher of Mack's Athletics; Sam Jones of the Red Sox, Pick of the Cubs, and Ross Young of the Giants are among the others who have made real good.

Tennis produced a good player in sixteen-year-old Vincent Richards, who won the boys' national title, and played through several rounds in the main event, the national lawn tennis championship, which was won by Lindley Murray.

The Anderson brother of New York, neither over eighteen, engaged in several tournaments in which they usually had to play each other in the finals.

Frank Shea, a University of Pittsburgh runner, started the athletic world by running the quarter mile in 47 3-5 seconds. This race was run in the rain, too.

On the turf young Lyke was about the only one new to show in front this year with any frequency. However, Preece, another youngster, did very well.

Indoors at the billiard table young Walter Cochran demonstrated himself as the most worthy opponent of Willie Hoppe, if Hoppe has such a thing as a worthy opponent.

NOT ANY CLASSES FOR DOCKED HORSES

Entrants Shown to Saddle at New York Must Have Long Tails.

In making up the prize list soon to be issued for the New York National Horse Show all classes for docked saddle horses have been eliminated. The type has become so nearly extinct that the few shown hereafter will have to compete in the same classes with long-tailed horses of the thoroughbred type, which now dominate the show rings.

The action of the association is deemed to mark the passing of the old-time type of saddle horse which held undisputed sway in the early days of the horse show back in 1883, and for many years afterward. The beginning of the end came when Vivian Gooch of Windsor, England, was engaged to judge about fifteen years ago. He pronounced the American saddle horses too "harshness," meaning they looked like harness horses, and in judging he gave the principal prizes to a few long-tailed horses of the thoroughbred type exhibited by horsemen who knew what the English expert liked.

Owners and admirers of the brilliant actioned, high styled, docked horses raised a commotion over Gooch's revolutionary awards, but the association stood behind him, and he came back year after year until the English type was firmly established here.

Exhibitors of docked horses threatened to go on strike when the tide began to run strongly against them, and the National Horse Show Association then poured oil on the troubled waters by making separate classes for docked and undocked saddle horses.

THE N.H.A. SUSPENDS FOR ANOTHER YEAR

This Will Again Leave Toronto Club Without a Place to Operate.

At a meeting of the National Hockey Association, held in Montreal, at which five clubs were represented, it was decided to suspend operations for another season. The suspension came from a motion of S. E. Lichtenhein, of the Wanderers, and was seconded by George Kennedy, of Canadiens. Toronto and Ontario voted against the motion and could see no cause for the suspension, while Ottawa, which club had the deciding vote, cast it for the motion, with the result that the N.H.A. will move out of the way for the National Hockey League, the new association formed a year ago, for another season.

The suspension of operation by the National Hockey Association means that the Toronto club, under the ownership and control of E. J. Livingstone, will not be operated this season, as the other does not hold a franchise in the new association. A year ago his players were leased to a Toronto club, run by the Arena Company of Toronto, and won the championship.

Following the meeting of the N.H.A., an informal gathering of the members of the National Hockey League was held and the plans for the season discussed. No definite action was taken other than that a meeting was decided on to be called within a couple of weeks. Frank Calder, re-elected president of the N.H.A. and the board of directors were all re-elected and the sale of the Quebec club franchise to Percy Quinn of Toronto was ratified.

SUNDAY FOOTBALL AT THE HARVARD STADIUM

Adjutant Dunham Tells of U.S. Government's Attitude Toward College Sport.

Sunday football in the Harvard Stadium will be very likely played this fall by a team representing the Harvard soldiery and units of nearby colleges, such as Tufts, Boston College and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. This will be the first Sabbath football game ever staged in the Stadium, although Soldiers' Field has been the scene of several Sunday baseball games the past summer.

That there is a possibility of the Harvard Army Training Corps playing football this fall was made known when Adjutant Dunham, in questions regarding the Government's attitude toward college sports, said:

"The Government believes in athletics to foster company spirit and maintain the high morale of the unit, but it has taken an aggressive attitude toward the heavy expense of organized athletics. Long strips, professional coaches and expensive training tables are taboo."

Professional Hockey "Mystery."

Toronto Star: The professional hockey league began its annual "mystery" talk and from now on until about time for the ice to appear, Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto fans will be entitled to guess as to who's who, and what's what in pro circles. As a matter of fact it appears that Saturday's meeting in Montreal not only failed to clarify the situation, but added to the mystery surrounding the operations of the league. It was announced, following the conferences of the club owners, that the National Hockey Association had suspended for the time being, and that no move had yet been made to reorganize the National Hockey League, under which name the series was conducted last year. The Quebec franchise in the N. H. A. was transferred to Percy Quinn of the Toronto Shamrocks, and he and the Toronto voted together against the suggestion to suspend for the season, but Wanderers, Canadiens and Ottawas voted the other way, the last-named having the deciding vote. Meanwhile, the Toronto and Shamrocks both expect to play this coming winter, but in what league or rink, or company, nobody seems to know.

McGILL DECLINES TO PLAY NIAGARA CAMP

Games Already Arranged With Ottawa and Royal Military College.

That the McGill wartime football club will engage in four games this fall was definitely assured yesterday when arrangements were closed for the return match with Royal Military College. The R.M.C. team opens the local season in Montreal on October 9th, though this will not be the first game for McGill, as the red and white team goes to Ottawa on October 12th, and McGill's season will close, in all probability, with the R.M.C. game on November 2nd.

That interest in football is keen was evidenced when Secretary Howard Melville of the McGill Union received a letter from the secretary of the Rugby club of the Machine Gun Section at Niagara Camp asking for home and home games with the college team. Unfortunately, it will not be possible to grant this request, as the McGill dates are now fully taken up.
