At the Theatres

At the Grand. What's in a name? Did you ever think about that? Many people when going to a picture show never do, and therefore go where there is the most attractive display. But a good name has more to do with a film than anything else, and all those who like the very best in picture production don't want to miss the Vitagraph five-reel feature that will be shown at the Grand to-night and also to-morrow, both matinee and night. It is a feature picture de luxe, and the title is "The Princess of Park Row." As the name would suggest, the plot deals with the adventures of a young girl in New York and of course the scenery is of the territory surrounding this section of the city. Besides this exceptionally fine photoplay, there will also be the Pathe News, a Longsome Luke comedy of the usual laughable type, and other reels that will complete a high-class bill for these two days. For the vaudeville, Gordon and Ryan will present an act that comes well recommended, and its striking novelty will surely delight the fancy of the patrons of the Grand.

At the Strand. For Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the management announces two super-features on each programme, commencing with "The Mysterious Client," a five part photoplay starring Irene Castle, the best known woman in the world, supported by an all-star cast, including Walter Orland, the villain of "Patria." The story is full of thrills of the character and intensity of a gripping melodrama and at the same time has countless unexpected twists and many bright comedy features. This is the first production Mrs. Castle has made since the heroic death of her husband, Capt. Vernon Castle, who was accidentally killed in an aviation camp in Texas. Also on the same programme we offer Mae Marsh in "Money Mad," a story of intensified interest in the life of a girl who lived and loved in a house of lies, a new kind of detective story, with a surprise finish. Something just different. We will also show the sixth episode of the "House of Hate" and the usual comedy and news reels, making altogether a very entertaining and interesting programme.

THE DELIVERANCE OF RHEIMS COMPLETED

The French Over the Sappe River and Germans Retired in Disorder.

(Canadian Press Despatch) Paris, Oct. 7.—French troops have crossed the Sappe river eastward of Oranville and have reached the outskirts of Bazancourt and Boul-Sur-Suppe after severe fighting. At Clement-Arnes heavy losses have been inflicted upon the Germans, who retired in disorder. The fighting completed the deliverance of Rheims. The enemy resisted furiously, but was unable to check the French, who captured several hundred prisoners.
