"The Wife" By Jane Phelps

HAPPY DAYS FOLLOW THE DINNER IN THE VILLAGE

CHAPTER LIX.

"You must take me to some more of those quaint eating places, Brian," Ruth said on the way home. "They are very entertaining." "I thought you wouldn't like them, that they wouldn't be smart enough for you." "Oh, but Brian! you must let me decide. Ask me when you want to go, and if I don't care to go along I'll tell you, but give me the chance to refuse."

They both knew she had her luncheon with Mollie King, of the day before, in mind; although it had not again been mentioned. "All right, Ruth, I like meeting the people I know, like seeing them, talking to them. I just thought you didn't care for them."

So a sort of flag of truce was fixed up. Neither mentioned anything disagreeable again. Yet both were thinking of the same thing, both wondering, in a way, how they were going to get along without constant friction.

Ruth had no intention of giving up her position. Brian had no intention of spending his time alone. He would cut out the lunches when Ruth was at home; that was only fair when she had been so decent. But when she left him, he would do as he pleased—and she had no kick coming. This was the way his cogitations ended.

"What's this?" he asked, picking up the rent receipt. "I had to go by the office this noon, and as I had the money, I ran in and paid it. I thought it would save an extra trip," she answered as unceremoniously as she could.

Brian made no remark. "Your clients are so slow in paying what they owe you, I will pay the house bills until you get your money in. What little they do give you, we need to sport with. I expect it is so with all professional men—that they have hard times collecting their bills. I know it is with doctors," she was talking to gain time, to take his mind from her offer to pay the bills. "Old Doctor Graham-used to say that 'people expected a doctor to eat promises, and so gave them nothing else.'"

"People are slow in paying professional men," Brian responded. "Yes I haven't so much out," he added honestly.

That was one thing Ruth loved in Brian. His truthfulness. She had never known him to lie to her about the slightest thing. He might keep still, not tell her things, but if she asked him, she had the truth. It was a comfort, too, especially since she had found out about Mollie King.

Ruth was very busy at the store the next few days, very tired at night. Brian saw that she looked exhausted, and said nothing about going out in the evening, for which Ruth was grateful.

Kenyon Roberts and his wife came in one evening to play cards, but aside from that, they spent the time alone. Brian had quite recovered his good nature. Ruth was careful not to mention anything that might annoy him, and they had a quiet, happy week together.

Ruth had gone to bed night after night with a lighter heart than she had known for many days. She smiled in the dark as she thought of Brian, his boyish sulks, his irresponsibility. At times she felt almost as if she might be his mother. "I'd spank him, if I were," she said to herself. Her heart yearned over him. She loved him with every fibre of her being. She wanted to make him happy, to be happy herself—and there were so many things she had to consider.

No man could be more charming than could Brian when he bestirred himself; few men more interesting. He had an unerring taste in the subject to choose for conversation, fitting it like a glove to his audience. Yet, with this unusual asset, he could be just exactly the opposite when either too indolent, or too upset because of some foolish happening, to make an effort.

Ruth had come to realize this trait and to try in every way to combat the indolence or grouch that made him so different from what he could be when he chose. She saw clearly that his ability to charm, to interest, would be a big factor in his success professionally if he did not so easily allow himself to be switched off by his feeling. She talked to him of this, not in a fault-finding way, but emphasizing the good points, while speaking of the others simply as something he did unconsciously.

"Why, Brian," she said as they sat in the little living room after dinner, "I believe you could be one of the biggest lawyers in New York if you weren't so temperamental; or if you weren't so easily upset. It's part of your temperament that appeals so strongly to people. When you first meet people they are drawn to you very quickly. But you are such a boy! If they don't do just as you think they should, you show it plainly. You must learn to hide it when you are not pleased."

"I'll get there some day, and without playing the hypocrite, too."

"I don't want you to be hypocritical, dear; I only want you to show your best side. Keep the other under cover. It will pay."

Chronic Diseases Take Hold Slowly

Kidney and Bladder Troubles don't attack you suddenly. Chronic diseases of these organs are generally the result of neglect. Nature gives you plenty of warning when your kidneys are out of order and need assistance; you notice a dull pain in the back; you are dizzy, have headaches, feel languid, tired and lifeless, nervous. There is no mistaking the symptoms, and when Nature warns you—obey—later you will regret it.

Putting off never cures. Gin Pills do. At the first sign of Kidney or Bladder Trouble, buy a box of Gin Pills and take them. They will help your kidneys to perform their proper function and renew your previous strength and vigor.

Among our hundreds of testimonials is one from Mr. B. C. David, King's Co., N.S. Mr. David writes:
"I was suffering from a dreadful lame back and hips, so much so that I could hardly straighten up. I got a box of Gin Pills and they helped me immediately. I have continued to take Gin Pills, and now the pains in both hips and back are gone. I shall always recommend Gin Pills to my friends and other sufferers."

Mr. David's case is only one of the many to which Gin Pills have brought immediate relief. Sufferers from Kidney or Bladder trouble should heed what has been done in such cases and get relief almost everywhere throughout Canada—50c a box. A free sample will be sent you if you write to The National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto, Ont. U. S. residents should address N. Dr. Co., Inc., 202 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y. 14

TALKING IT OVER With Lorna Moon

How Can We Solve The Clothes Question?

I am an essay mark for the high priced article. I think most women are. It is easy to convince a woman that an article is superior and desirable if the price is sufficiently outrageous. We admire an article according to the price we pay for it. Oh yes we do! (You don't need to let hubby see this article sister—he will only "I-told-you-so" if you do. They want you to read it through, because we really must do something about this clothes question.)

Somehow we women cannot think sanely on the subject of clothes and consequently are the victims of our own folly. We must pay high prices now, because for years we have been willing, even anxious to do so. Why should it take three times the money to dress friend wife that it does to dress friend husband?

Where is the man who will pay nineteen fifty for a felt hat with a yard of gros grain ribbon upon it? If a man pays seven dollars for a hat, he feels he has gone the limit. If he pays only four fifty he is much better satisfied. Where is the man who will pay eighty-five dollars for a suit, knowing that it will be outworn next year because the styles have changed? A man has got one price in his head when he sets out to buy a suit. It is usually somewhere around thirty-five dollars. For that sum he can get a suit which equals or

A Happy Ending for Towel or Pillow Case.

As the warm weather draws near, new ideas in light hand-work are greatly in demand by the woman who cannot sit with idle fingers. For such times, flat crochet is admirably

Effective Finish for Towel End. suited and many a bride has added considerably to the daintiness of her household linen by the work of her nimble fingers during minutes which might otherwise have flown by leaving no trace of their passing. An unusually attractive towel end is shown here. It has a band of flat crochet insertion placed above a hemstitched hem. The ever popular bow knot is the basis of the design which is a running border. Between each bow-knot and caught by the ribbon streamer is a plain conventional little flower. When worked with No. 70 crochet cotton the insertion measures about two inches wide and lends itself to the decoration of many household fittings. Not only is it charming set into towels and bed linen, but is exceptionally good in scarfs of all descriptions. Either a white one for bureau or buffet or when worked in ecru as the decoration of an ecru linen scarf for the library table. Included in the pattern with this bow knot insertion are an insertion and edging of flat crochet which match. These are in every way as adaptable as the one illustrated here.

Flat crochet is the simplest and most quickly worked of all the hand made laces and adds a note of distinction where it is used which none of the imitation laces can give.
