For hot air methods Germany still leads the world.

Big Bertha's are having a sorry time in beating it back to Berlin.

The Victory Loan drive should advance as fast as Marshal Foch's has.

The Germans are going back, Boost them along by buying Victory Bonds.

Germany is talking of a change of constitution, but it by no means implies a change of heart!

Don't forget to pay up the arrears when the collection plate is passed in church next Sunday.

At the rate the Austrian-Hungarian empire is disintegrating, the Allies can make peace only with the pieces.

Are you a friend of the Kaiser? If not hit him with a Victory bond. The old butcher has few friends now.

Besides being something of a "Queen" the average nurse is proving herself a good deal of a heroine in these days of war and flu.

The paper shortage is acute. Why waste good paper by continuing the exchange of notes with either Germany or Austria? Leave it to Foch and Haig.

General Fotheringham wants to suppress the newspapers. Let him start on the new government publication, the useless Canadian Official Record.

The German crown prince says he has no desire to annihilate the Allied armies. He tried hard enough, but failed. Present day protestations will avail him nothing.

The town of Prescott won the Victory Loan flag the first day of the canvas. Congratulations. The citizens have a right to be proud of their accomplishment.

The public should be warned against becoming impressed with the idea that the epidemic is over and there is no longer any necessity for exercising care. Precautions should still be taken.

The United Farmers of Ontario, an organization formed for furthering agricultural interests and which will take part in future political affairs, has adopted as one of its planks the nationalization of railway, telegraph, telephone and similar public utilities.

Of the ten thousand houses in Lens not one remains. Every house which constituted the workingmen's paradise has been deliberately razed and most of the gardens ruined for a long time to come. Oh! the ghoul.

It is to insure against the repetition of any such outrages that the Victory bonds are being purchased.

WHOSE SWORD IS IT? The Allies demand the unconditional surrender of Germany before they begin to talk peace.

Prussian war and those of to-day have been published. Here is one that is striking, both in its points of resemblance and of difference. On the evening of Sedan, General Castelnau went to Bismarck's quarters with a special message from Napoleon, who had sent his sword to the king of Prussia and surrendered, in the hope that the king would grant a more honorable capitulation.

Disatisfaction with President Wilson's inclination to exchange peace notes with Berlin is growing in the United States.

THE AMERICAN SENTIMENT. Disatisfaction with President Wilson's inclination to exchange peace notes with Berlin is growing in the United States.

My own view is a very simple one. There is no German government in existence with which I would discuss anything.

President Wilson, it must be confessed, has conducted his correspondence with unusual skill, but it is questionable whether such correspondence was expedient or even necessary.

Future historians will comment with some surprise upon the fact that the first effect among the Allied peoples of the professed German acceptance of their terms was to arouse a feeling of disturbance.

AVOIDING A BAD PEACE. Future historians will comment with some surprise upon the fact that the first effect among the Allied peoples of the professed German acceptance of their terms was to arouse a feeling of disturbance.

It is no wonder, then, that at so tremendous a moment as the present, so big with the fate of humanity and civilization for centuries to come, anxiety should be mixed with hope as each act in the mighty drama is unrolled.

terms and trying to avoid the acceptance of what we had previously declared our willingness to take.

Such criticism never has done the press any harm, but, on the contrary, it shows the great power wielded by the newspapers.

A practical demonstration of this is shown in a paragraph which appears on the same page of the Toronto Globe as the report of Fotheringham's criticism.

Here is a German soldier, deprived of the privilege of a free, independent press, laboring under a pitiful delusion that all is going well with the real course of events.

This is the state of affairs which General Fotheringham, the Instantly! Corns Stop Hurting! Corns Loosen and Lift Out. No pain! Few drops loosen corns and calluses so they fall off—Try it!—Magic!

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man. Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn and instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn so loose that you lift it out, root and all, with the fingers.

TWO GENERALS

"Confound that Foch!" sighs Ludendorff; "I was a giant till he came, and made me seem a saved dwarf; he's cooked my goose and spoiled my fame. I was a giant, fair to see, a man colossal brave and strong, the German people looked on me, as one who could do nothing wrong."
