Waldron'S

THEATRICAL.

"Mutt and Jeff in Woolly West." Once again these two bona-fide humorists "Mutt and Jeff" are again in our midst. This time they appear as seekers after the yellow metal, with their adventures taking place in the Golden West. And as usual that astute and far discerning manager, Gus Hill, is sponsoring their exploits, having arranged for their representation in a three-act musical comedy which is said to be the best and most entertaining of the Mutt and Jeff series produced upon the stage.

The action is punctuated with a dozen song hits, ensembles, dances, features, novelties, surprises, screams, rib-tickling bits and high-class revelry without the semblance of any lulls or monotonous moments. There is an admixture of plausible drama along with irresistible amusement of the kind that always finds ready response by theatre-goers who expect to be entertained and interested in a manner befitting the reputation of these world renowned cartoon creations. A pretty and fascinating chorus attired in captivating array have been engaged in conjunction with an extremely competent cast of artists culled from the ranks of Broadway attractions. The big event which bears the title of "Mutt and Jeff in the Woolly West" is scheduled to be held at the Grand Opera House to-night for one night only.

"General Post." The announcement that America's greatest comedians, Thomas A. Wise and Edward H. Robins, will appear in "General Post" at the Grand Opera House this coming Friday and Saturday evenings with an additional Saturday matinee, will be of much interest to local theatre-goers. Around the now-a-day theme of "General Post" is woven a story so true, so delightful, and so suppliant, that it is well nigh irresistible. The story pictures the changing code of conservative old English with its fetish blue blood and ancestry. Sir Denny is brought in very modern and very sensible daughter falls in love with her father's tailor. The idea of her marrying a tailor is preposterous to her blue-blooded family; nevertheless she proposes to him and suffers the humiliation of being refused on social grounds. Then comes the great war, at which Sir Denny and his myopic kind had persistently scoffed. But war finds Smith, the tailor, prepared and trained in military matters. It is his big chance and he sees it. Just before going to the front as colonel of the regiment, in which the baronet's son is a private, he returns as guest of the son. He is snubbed, but the end of the war finds him a brigadier-general, famous over all the land, and the Broughtons somewhat changed in their opinions and anxious to hail him as son-in-law. The wish is fulfilled at the end, in a most delightfully unexpected manner, brought about by a very convention which they have earned to take so lightly.

"At The Strand." "Flower of the Dusk," the charming play starring dainty Viola Dana, that opens to-day at the Strand, was adapted from the novel by Myrtle Reed. The story shows the beautiful love a young girl has for her blind father, whose flower of the dusk she is. To what lengths the devotion of this little lame girl goes in her love and sacrifice for her beloved father and of his lasting love for his dead wife, the charming play shows with powerful intensity. "Her Man," the six part dramatic production, starring Elaine Hammerstein, has been produced from the famous novel, "The Battle Cry," by Charles Neville Buck, a story that is popular all the world over and loses none of the excitement and tense moments that are the feature of the novel. This is the second production that Miss Hammerstein has appeared in since she left the legitimate stage. For the special attraction we offer the ever popular star, William S. Hart, in the other western drama, entitled, "The Silent Stranger," a drama full of action and "pep."

ALLAN ROSS JENKINS DIES OF PNEUMONIA Was With Canadian Infantry in France—His Brother Died Recently.

Walter C. Jenkins, Quebec street, received official notification Thursday morning that his son, Allan Ross Jenkins, has died of pneumonia in the South African Hospital, France. Mr. Jenkins had been ill for only a short time, and on Wednesday news was received that he was in a serious condition. He enlisted in the fall of 1915 in the Canadian Mounted Rifles under Major Stroud, and went overseas in March of the following year. Later he transferred to the infantry in France. He was twenty-two years of age. His brother, Horace A. Jenkins, died of pneumonia about two weeks ago.

HAS BEEN WOUNDED. But Hopes Soon To Be Back Into the Game.

George Gillespie, Wolfe Island, has received official notice that his son, Albert E. Gillespie, had been wounded on Oct. 4th. He volunteered for service as a private in the early stages of the war, and went overseas with the 144th Battalion from Kingston. On arriving in England Mr. Gillespie took a course in machine gunnery, and was afterwards sent to France in charge of a machine gun crew, having been promoted to lance-corporal.

Letters received at home have borne evidence of many hard fought battles and narrow escapes. Lance-corporal Gillespie was awarded the military medal for bravery in the battle of Aug. 28th, and was also recommended for sergeant stripes, but unfortunately was wounded before his promotion went through. In his last letter home he speaks lightly of his wounds, and hopes to be back in the game in the near future.
